About People.
McAdoo Is Youthful.
Curry Well Cared For.
Gov. Smith Ready to Fight.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

CHICAGO, June 28.

Back beside Lake Michigan, seated in the Stadium for the Democratic convention. There, for days to come, Democratic hopes and Democratic hates will roar, as Lake Michigan's waters roar down Niagara's cliff, farther east.

Trained reporters will tell you the news. Be sure to read Louis Seibold. He knows America's politics, both kinds.

HERE YOU MAY read about people.

Other happenings, as far from politics as that northern Tannenbaum from the southern palm, must be neglected today.

Mr. McAdoo was at the station early, to meet the Santa Fe Chief. Ordinarily, when you say to a man of middle age, "you look younger than you did twenty years ago," you mean, really:

"What, are you still alive?"

Not so with Mr. McAdoo. He is thin, active, eager, youthful. He can press his fingers against his solar plexus and feel the vertebrae on the other side. Try that on yourself. You will be surprised.

But he cannot wait, he is hurrying to meet "the most charming person in the world." Certainly, you guessed it, Woodrow Wilson's daughter, Mrs. McAdoo.

THERE ARE many waiting in many rooms, on the Blackstone's seventh floor, where Commissioner Curry, head of Tammany Hall, has his headquarters. The ordinary people sit in outside rooms. The EXTRAORDINARY PEOPLE in a big inside room.

Mr. McCooey, of Brooklyn, is there. Don't say "I do not know him," even if you live in Seattle, for that argues that YOU are unknown. He is talking to Judge Daniel F. Cohalan, who can talk Gaelic, and also common sense in politics.

THERE IS Judge Olvany, once Tammany's head, and there are many others, including the "promising young ones" encouraged by Tammany, as a good horseman encourages young colts.

The young and promising include Mr. Curry's son, who says:

"Father would like to see you, before you go."

MR. CURRY, whom Tammany obeys, as his legions obeyed Lucullus, is in another inside room, the insidest of all.

In peace and comfort, all alone, he is eating his breakfast. You need not ask about his health. The breakfast includes a large sirloin steak, fried potatoes, hot biscuit, coffee, and only fragments remain.

MR. CURRY calls, and Mrs. Curry comes from an adjoining room to see that he is not letting himself be bothered too much. Happy the man, great or small, that possesses a devoted, intelligent wife, to make him live wisely. The thing cannot be done, otherwise.

Mr. Curry gives information and asks questions; for instance:

"What would Mr. Hearst think of so and so?"

The information, unfortunately, is for private consumption, not for broadcasting.

MR. AYLESWORTH, head of National Broadcasting Company, telephones:

"Can you give us a few minutes this evening to broadcast a resume of the general situation?"

The resume would sound like this:

"Dear unseen audience: I do not know anything about the general situation, nor does any one else."

EVERYTHING IS uncertainty, and many complications are involved, for instance, to put it bluntly, as politicians do:

"What would Gov. Roosevelt do about Judge Seabury's charges against Mayor Walker, if Mr. Curry, whose fondness for Mayor Walker is like that of a father, should turn his delegates against Gov. Roosevelt?"

Those that know Gov. Roosevelt believe that no action by the convention would influence his judgment, in a matter affecting a man's career. But politicians, skeptical, quote the story of the two gentlemen, one afraid of a barking dog. His friend asked:

"Don't you know that a barking dog never bites?"

The other replies:

"Yes, I know it, and you know it, but does the dog know it?"

You have heard that story, but not in connection with a presidential nomination.

FOR LIGHT, let us wander on to "Candidates' Row" in the Congress Hotel. Ripley would hardly dare print it, but the candidates are all strung out on one floor, like department stores in State street. And explain this, if you can without a Chicago psychological chart, the row is on Floor B.

You are told that it is the eleventh floor. The elevator puts you out and it's the second floor. Yes, the eleventh floor is the second floor in that hotel. That makes the small town man on the third floor live in room 1209—Something to write home.

IN A LONG alley, walls covered with placards, are the headquarters of many that sit and wait, knowing the uncertainties of the lightning's stroke. You see Senator Reed's headquarters many waiting for that hard fighter who has served his state and the nation so well. He is in a conference of delegates.

Names and signs, signs and names, but a strong current

BULLETIN.

CHICAGO STADIUM, June 28.— (AP.) — The rules of the last Democratic convention requiring a two-thirds majority for nomination of a presidential candidate were adopted by the rules committee today after the compromise was cast aside.

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The Democrats squared off today for the first open clash between Roosevelt and anti-Roosevelt forces on the election of a permanent chairman. The choice lay between Jouett Shouse, backed by those opposing the New York Governor, and Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, the Roosevelt choice.

But as the delegates got down to the business of the convention's second day, they were confronted by one outstanding fact:

The party's presidential nominee will be named by the traditional two-thirds rule.

FIGHT DROPPED

This became a certainty when Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, from Albany, directed his lieutenants here to cease their fight for a substitute special rule whereby the convention would nominate by majority vote if after six ballots no candidate was able to command two-thirds.

It was the second time in less than 24 hours the Empire State Executive had called off a row over the two-thirds rule. Late yesterday he ordered that the fight to abrogate the two-thirds rule entirely be dropped. It was, but his followers last night jammed through the rules committee a substitute providing for the six-ballot vote under the old rules and then switching to a majority decision. It was this substitute that Roosevelt squashed today.

James A. Farley, generalissimo for Roosevelt, seemed confident that he would win the Roosevelt fight to install Senator Walsh as permanent chairman instead of Shouse. He said:

"Our last figures show that

ORDER PROBE OF STATE COSTS

Revolt Against Pinchot Plan On as House Demands Cuts in Wages, Expenses

HARRISBURG, June 28.—(AP.) — Governmental economy today became the chief objective of the special session of the Legislature.

In the House, the center of fiscal legislation, an exhaustive inquiry into the costs of state government was launched before the first echoes of the opening gavel had died away. It instituted an investigation widespread in scope and giving the House Appropriations Committee practically unrestricted power to take the state spending machine apart and ascertain just what absorbs the unessential expenditures.

A series of resolutions calling for detailed reports from all fiscal officers and from various departments were adopted without opposition. They were introduced by members of the Appropriations Sub-Committee which will conduct the survey and were acted upon with unanimous consent of the House.

DATA DEMANDED

They appeared soon after the Appropriations Committee had decided to take the initiative in the matter. The House approval came also in the wake of the introduction by the Talbot-Turner group last night of a resolution calling for such an inquiry and while the Wade-Sheffer bloc was listening to demands for general salary re-

Big Business Has Its Rights

By W. R. HEARST

SOME OF THE GENTLEMEN engaged in the noble experiment of bootlegging are much disturbed over the inclination of the government to interfere with their business.

They point out that the bootlegging industry has grown to be one of the leading industries of the United States. They say that it involves a great investment of capital and employs a great amount of skilled labor.

They assert that the rights of capital must be respected and that industry must be freed from the intermeddling of politicians, ignorant of the intricacies of modern business.

They declare that there are many other businesses, such as hi-jacking, racketeering, kidnaping, blackmailing and gang killing which are mainly dependent on bootlegging and which will be greatly injured by undue interference with what might be called the mother industry.

They say too that a great many people will be thrown out of work and added to the army of the unemployed if the government persists in its bolshevist course of upsetting the complex routine of business.

FINALLY, THEY POINT OUT that the government has not interfered with other similar businesses, such as stock swindling and stock market rigging, or the selling of foreign gold bricks to American investors, or the issuing of bunk securities by American bankers, or any of the other phases of big banking, such as speculation, peculation, over-capitalization, stock manipulation and defalcation.

Indeed, say the noble experimenters in bootlegging and analogous industries, the big bankers have actually been rewarded by the government through large loans from the reconstruction corporation and have been recouped for some of their losses by the reconstruction corporation, and have been given money by the government to buy in at a cheap price the good securities they have forced their clients to sell.

The government, the noble experimenters say, has never recouped the bootlegging business for its losses, and surely the great bootlegging industry and the racketeering industry and other co-related industries are just as important to the country as crooked banking.

SO THE BOOTLEGGERS and racketeers are much disturbed, and indeed alarmed over the bolshevist tendency of modern government to interfere with their capitalistic rights and the conduct of their purely private business.

Of course, as a matter of fact, it does seem unreasonable that the government should indulge in undue discrimination between the bootlegging business and the banking business, but the question of campaign contributions must be taken into consideration.

The bootleggers and racketeers have never taken that healthy interest in the politics of their country, which is the prime duty of every good citizen.

The bootleggers and racketeers have never contributed to the expenses of federal campaigns and consequently have no recognized right to call up their government in Washington and tell it what they want it to do.

The bankers, on the other hand, are heavy campaign contributors. They take a peculiarly patriotic interest in politics.

Those of them who are the fiscal agents of foreign nations sometimes expend in American politics large sums from the funds of these foreign nations so that favors for these foreign nations may be secured from our American government on account of the patriotic interest these foreign nations

FLIER TELLS OF FUTILE QUESTS

Reaffirms Faith in Aides At Curtis Trial Despite Story Girl Aided in Plot

FLEMINGTON, N. J., June 28.—(AP.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today reaffirmed his faith in his servants and in Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, but expressed no opinion about the character of John Hughes Curtis, on trial for impeding capture of the murderers of the Lindbergh baby.

Under strict examination at the Curtis trial Col. Lindbergh said Curtis told him the kidnapers had disclosed a member of the Lindbergh household had aided in the kidnaping. Curtis said he thought the servant was a woman. Lindbergh continued:

"We only have three servants, and I have complete faith in them."

CERTAIN OF CONDON

The three membrs of the Lindbergh domestic staff, Betty Gow, the baby's nurse; Ollie Wheatley, the butler, and Mrs. Wheatley, the housekeeper, were present in court.

Under cross-examination Col. Lindbergh said he was slow to place credence in Curtis' statement that he was in touch with the kidnapers, but had accepted Dr. Condon's story from the first and still believed it. He said:

"I have always believed that Dr. Condon had been in contact with the kidnapers or their representatives."

STORY OF KIDNAPING

Curtis' story of the kidnaping, as he told Lindbergh, he learned it from the kidnapers themselves, was as follows, according to Lindbergh's testimony today:

The kidnaping was staged by

WOMEN LEAVE ON BONUS HIKE

Women and children today joined the army of bonus march on Washington.

Leaving from Hazelwood avenue this afternoon, 17 men, women and children were to begin the long trek over hill and valley. They will go on foot.

Trucks had been promised, but the promise was withdrawn. Rather than give up their trip, the families decided to walk. The group was organized by Mrs. George Huey, who last Saturday flew to Washington with Cyrus Davis, and spoke to the marchers.

Of the 17, the majority are represented in three families. They are:

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dodson and their two children, evicted from their Lincoln avenue home last night; Mr. and Mrs. James McKee, of Hazelwood avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Klein and four children.

The families moving along the highway today will be only the vanguard of a larger group, Mrs. Huey asserted. The next contingent of women and children will begin the march next week.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—(INS.) — The specter of hunger drifted over the bonus army today, and another national commander resigned.

Thomas Kelly, of Camden, N. J., who succeeded Walter W. Waters, of Portland, Ore., as commander, voluntarily stepped out of office, and George Kleinholtz, of Portland, took charge and issued an appeal to the country for food and money.

Woman Chain Store Manager Held Up

An armed holdup man this morning robbed Miss Bessie Dolan, 35, manager of the P. H. Butler chain store at Rippey and Beatty streets, East Liberty, of $10. He escaped in an automobile, which had been parked in front of the store.

The robbery occurred while Miss Dolan was alone in the store and a few minutes after she had opened the place for business. When she turned to get a loaf of bread the man had requested, he drew a revolver and forced her to lie face downward on the floor while he took the money from the cash register.

WALSH MARRIES EAST END GIRL

The bride was Miss Catherine Brassell, of 433 South Pacific avenue, East End. The ceremony was performed in St. Lawrence's Catholic Church by the Rev. Father F. J. Dailey.

Members of the two immediate families attended the wedding breakfast in Hotel Schenley. The couple planned to leave later today for a honeymoon in the East.

A month ago Walsh was sentenced to a year's imprisonment for violation of the election laws. He has asked for a new trial. His conviction was on charges of participation in the registration of 900 fictitious voters in the First Ward.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 28.—(AP.)—Action to collect an amount it claims is due on two 6 per cent collateral trust notes for $1,060,000 from the Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line Company, now in receivership, was started in Chancery Court today by the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

3 German Balloons Ascend 65,000 Feet

STUTTGART, Germany, June 28.—(AP.)—Three test balloons carrying measuring instruments were sent up 65,000 feet today under the direction of Prof. Erich Regener, of the Technical University. The altitude was greater than that attained last year by Prof. August Piccard in his ascension to the stratosphere.

Fleisher Faces Trial In Murders July 11

DETROIT, June 28.—(INS.)—Trial of Harry Fleisher, Purple Gang leader, on a murder charge in connection with the Collingwood Manor massacre of three rival gangsters, was set for July 11, when he was arraigned yesterday before Judge John Brennan.

Fleisher pleaded not guilty. Vainly sought for more than a year in the murder of three members of the "Little Navy" Gang, and later for questioning in the Lindbergh kidnaping, he surrendered voluntarily recently.

Stork Brings Son To Lombardo Home

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 28.—(AP.)—Victor Lombardo, one of the four Lombardo brothers of orchestral note, received a telegram from New York today announcing the birth of a son to his wife there.

The child, first born to any of the Lombardo brothers, will be named Guy III.

The Problem

THIRTEEN million people will be out of work by next winter, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor estimates.

The Remedy

A $5,000,000,000 bond issue by the United States to build great public works, employ several million men, start the nation back to prosperity.

HARMONICA KING MISSING AT SEA

NICE, France, June 28.—(AP.)—Friends here of Borrah Minnevitch, Broadway "harmonica king," and his wife expressed fear for their safety today when they were two days overdue at Tunis, North Africa, for where they embarked on a private sloop last Friday.

The Minnevitches were bound for Abyssinia to hunt lions because they lost a bet with "Roxy," (S. L. Rothafel), noted radio and theater impresario, that their first child would be a boy.

Raskob's 'Interest,' Not Principal, O. K.

—By Will Rogers—

CHICAGO, June 28.—Raskob, the receiver of the Democratic party, opened the convention, and General Motors dropped 5 points.

The talking started at 12 o'clock and everybody didn't become entirely exhausted till almost 4.

Raskob spoke of his "great interest" in the Democratic party. Interest nothing, he will do well to even get 50 per cent of his principal back that he has put in it. He said it had been an "experience and a lesson to him."

The Democrats showed the touch with the common people by having Miss Evangeline Booth, of the Salvation Army, ask the Lord to bless 'em around early November.

When she took the stand to deliver her invocation a lot of delegates, just out of force of habit, started to go up and get their rations. It was a fitting tribute to

SHOUSE, WALSH OPPONENTS FOR JOB

we will elect Senator Walsh by about 60 votes."

That's a fairly narrow margin in a convention that has 1,154 delegates, and indicates more than anything else the closely drawn lines between Roosevelt and anti-Roosevelt.

Missouri seemed the pivotal point. Both sides on the Shouse-Walsh fight were working hard to get Missouri's 36 votes. There seemed a prospect that Missouri might decide it.

CLAIM DISPUTED

But Farley's figures of a 60-vote victory for Senator Walsh were disputed by Senator Hillard Tydings, of Maryland, who has been active in Shouse's behalf. He asserted:

"We will put Shouse in the chair by 100 votes."

Informed of Farley's claim, Tydings said:

"Bunk."

FARLEY ANNOUNCEMENT

Announcement that Roosevelt would sink or swim on the two-thirds rule was made by Farley to a minority group of the rules committee meeting to discuss plans for a finish fight on the floor. Farley said:

"You don't need to organize."

"We are a thousand per cent for the two-thirds rule in this convention and nobody has a right to speak for us."

Daniel F. Cohalan, who had been selected by Tammany to lead the floor fight, asked:

"Then you are not going to fight to have the nomination made by a majority after six ballots?"

PLATFORM SHIFT

Farley, at Roosevelt's direction, also agreed to have the platform adopted before the candidates are nominated. Earlier, the Roosevelt forces had planned to make a fight for a change in the convention rules under which nominations would be made prior to adoption of the platform.

Farley was plainly ruffled, and his announcement and his demeanor contributed to reports of serious dissension between him and his chief at Albany.

Asked about the rumored rift with his chief as he came into the hall, Farley shot back:

"That's a damned lie."

Roosevelt's withdrawal from the two-thirds fight after taking such a positive stand has had the effect of leaving Farley rather out on a limb, because no one had been more vigorous or more positive in organizing the majority forces than Farley.

Before going to the meeting, Farley had just spent a hectic 15 minutes on the telephone with Roosevelt.

Earlier, Farley had sent word to the rules committee to "get together" and not bring in a majority and minority report.

AVOID FIGHTS

It was quite apparent that the new policy of the Roosevelt forces is to avoid every floor fight that it is possible to avoid. They are already in an embarrassing position in the fight over the permanent chairmanship, and they apparently feel now that their best chance is to be conciliatory rather than dictatorial in all things appertaining to the convention.

Farley's abrupt action took the minority group by surprise, for they were militantly determined to go through with a savage fight on the abrogation of the two-thirds rule after the sixth ballot.

In that group, besides Cohalan, was Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, who has been perhaps the most dangerous antagonist of the original Roosevelt scheme of a majority nomination. But for Roosevelt's telephone call instructing his lieutenants to "lay off" the convention, this afternoon would have witnessed the strange spectacle of Glass, the fiery little Virginian and intimate of Woodrow Wilson, fighting shoulder to shoulder with Tammany Hall. It would have been a novel sight.

RANKS CRACKING

The opposition to Roosevelt, most of it of the "last ditch" variety, appeared more confident than ever today that they have him stopped.

There appeared to be some ground for this confidence, for there were signs of cracking in a few delegations that had been counted solidly for Roosevelt. Mississippi was one. The Mississippians had a stormy caucus that lasted for hours and, despite the fervent pleas of the Roosevelt leaders to stand firm, they postponed a decision. About half of them were for Roosevelt and the other half for Newton D. Baker and Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland. Iowa also showed signs of cracking.

two men, John and another known as Eric or Nils, who came from Newark.

After conferring with the unnamed member of the Lindbergh household they chloroformed the baby, taking him from the house through the pantry door downstairs. A green sedan was parked a few hundred yards from the house and the baby was taken away in that, under care of a nurse called Gretchen.

With the baby lying in an improvised cradle in the car the kidnapers drove to Cape May, N. J., where they boarded the schooner.

SAID WOMAN WROTE NOTES

Lindbergh said Curtis told him that Gretchen wrote all the ransom notes.

All during Linbergh's testimony Curtis sat at the defense table, his head held high, listening intently.

Shortly before he put out on the boat Cachalot on May 9 in a new effort to contact the kidnapers, Lindbergh continued, Curtis told him of meeting "Hilda," one of the alleged kidnap band, in a New York railroad station.

He quoted Curtis:

"I feel I know too much for my own good about the people I'm dealing with."

Col. Lindbergh said that on numerous occasions when Curtis told him of contacts with the kidnapers and instructions they gave him, both Edmund Bruce of Elmira, N. Y., and Lieut. George Richards, U. S. N., were present.

Bruce is an old friend of Curtis who drove him about on his reputed contact trips. Richards is a Navy flier, who piloted Curtis on many of his journeys. Both are expected to be called as state witnesses.

TELLS OF FINDING BODY

Prosecutor Anthony Hauck asked Lindbergh what explanation Curtis gave when efforts to make contact with the kidnapers repeatedly failed. Lindbergh said:

"He said Hilda explained her husband was in a difficult position, but would try to make contact. Mr. Curtis said he told her—using his words—if they were 'gin-piggling' me to say so and get out."

At last Col. Lindbergh came to the point in his story where he had to tell of the discovery of the baby's death. He had himself well in hand and spoke in a steady voice. He said:

"On May 12 Mr. Bruce told me that my son's body had been found."

The prosecutor asked:

"Did you identify the body?"

"Yes."

"How?"

"By the clothes and the feet."

Col. Lindbergh said that when the baby was found dead Curtis told him he would do everything possible to bring the kidnapers to justice.

Before being turned over to the defense Col. Lindbergh testified that after the baby's body was found he promised Curtis to do everything he could to give Curtis a chance to back up his story. Then on May 16 Curtis made the confession that all his negotiations had been a hoax, a confession he has since repudiated. Lindbergh said:

"He said he had hoped to sell his story to a newspaper, but he could not give reasons for everything he did. He was embarrassed when he made the statement."

DOBSON-PEACOCK LINKED

At one point in his testimony, Col. Lindbergh said Curtis had told of Dean H. Dobson-Peacock, one of his Virginia sponsors, having visited him in New York with a message from the kidnapers.

Curtis said the dean was taken to the eighth floor of a New York hotel which he found occupied by gangsters who threatened him and told him the only course to follow was to contact "John" on shore. John was said to be the man to whom D. John F. Condon had paid a futile $50,000 ransom in behalf of Col. Lindbergh. It was intimated John was ready to sell the baby to the highest bidder.

Lloyd Fisher conducted the cross-examination of Col. Lindbergh. He asked if Lindbergh required the presence of state police on his various trips while he was seeking return of the baby. Lindbergh said:

"It is not for me to run the state police."

NOT ASKED AS GUEST

He said Curtis had asked for no money beyond requesting that $25,000 be deposited in a bank as "earnest money."

Col. Lindbergh said he was not impressed when Curtis first approached him about his alleged negotiations with the kidnapers. He testified:

"I listened to his story and told him I thought he was being misled. But we wanted to keep all doors open."

Col. Lindbergh smiled when Fisher asked him if he had invited Curtis to his home as a guest. He said:

"I don't know what you mean. He came there while I was away. He used a bed in the northeast corner of the house. Usually a police officer was with him. I understood he was there voluntarily to aid the police."

Hoover Hinted as Fearing Nomination of Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, June 28.—(Universal.)—President Hoover has evidently become fearful of the nomination of Gov. Roosevelt by the Democratic convention.

"Roosevelt is the easiest candidate to defeat."

After a long White House conference yesterday, Harry S. New, of Indiana, formerly postmaster general and senator, said:

"If Roosevelt is nominated, Hoover is elected."

The general opinion of the correspondents in Washington is that President Hoover is trying to defeat Gov. Roosevelt's nomination by these inspired statements.

He is doing this either because he is afraid of Roosevelt, or because he is acting in response to the urge of the Morgan interests and the general Wall street dictation which he usually heeds.

DRIPPING WET PLATFORM DEMANDED

Spokesmen for 20 State and Territorial Delegations Threaten Fight on Floor

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 28.—A dripping wet plank, pledging the Democratic party to repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and immediate modification of the Volstead Act, was presented to the Democratic platform-writers today by spokesmen for 20 state and territorial delegations, including Pennsylvania, with a threat to carry it to the convention if it is left out of the platform.

The plank, 140-words long, would pledge the party to prevent the return of the saloon and to safeguard dry states against liquor importations from anti-dry neighbors. The "committee of nine," engaged in writing the platform, took it under advisement, but there were indications it would be rejected in favor of a mere declaration for resubmission of the Eighteenth Amendment.

BACKERS OF PLAN

Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts; Senator Robert L. Bulkley, of Onio, and E. Brooke Lee, of Maryland, sponsored the new anti-dry plank. They announced they would present it as a minority report to the full resolutions committee if the platform-writers rejected it. They declared they expected the full committee to adopt it.

The plank read:

"We favor the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"We demand that the Congress immediately propose such repeal to truly representative conventions in the states called to act solely on that proposal.

"We urge that the Democratic party co-operate in the enactment of such measures by the several states as will actually promote temperance, effectively prevent the return of the saloon and bring the liquor traffic into the open under complete supervision and control by the states.

"We demand that the federal government effectively exercise its power to protect states against importation of intoxicating liquors in violation of their laws.

"Pending repeal, we favor immediate modification of the Volstead act to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer and other beverages of such alcoholic content as is permissible under the Constitution and to provide therefrom a proper and needed revenue."

AGREE ON PLANKS

Tentative agreements were reached by the "inner group" on all other planks. The most important of these were on farm and unemployment relief.

The unemployment relief plank called for federal aid to states, when local relief funds are exhausted. It was silent as to aid for municipalities, although Democrats proposed such relief in the present Congress, only to meet with bitter condemnation from President Hoover.

This plank also approved the construction of public works "that are in the public interest in order to help relieve unemployment." It was considered an indorsement of the Garner public works bill, although no mention was made of a bond issue to finance the projects.

A host of minor planks were adopted. The foreign affairs plank, urging peaceful negotiation of international disputes, carried a passing reference to the World Court. The effort to incorporate a plank, suggesting a partial cancellation of war debts, failed.

Building Men File Bankruptcy Pleas

Joseph E. Drury, building supplies dealer of Waynesburg, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, listing liabilities of $107,898.98 and assets of $7,177.19. Frank J. Houpt, building contractor of Ligonier, listed liabilities of $15,080 and assets of $5,800 in a bankruptcy petition.

Big Business Has Its Rights and their fiscal agents have taken in our American political affairs.

THE BOOTLEGGERS and racketeers must have equal loyalty. They must not neglect their civic duties.

When the fat frying is in progress, they must contribute fat. When the shell game of politics is proceeding, they must shell out.

There may be some inconveniences connected with the proper discharge of civic duties, but the obligation to the party must above everything else be considered and discharged.

Only so can governmental favors be genuinely deserved and willingly distributed.

Other civic duties are important, but not SO important,—nor so remunerative.

Voting is important, but not so important as campaign contributing, because a liberal campaign contribution can buy more votes than even the most experienced and earnest repeater could possibly cast by his own individual effort.

Therefore, if the bootleggers, hi-jackers, highway robbers, gang murderers, kidnapers and blackmailers contribute liberally, there will probably be no more impudent interference by government with their business than there is with crooked banking and stock market swindling.

OF COURSE, BOTH PARTIES are adopting planks in favor of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, but in the ordinary course of political procedure it will take about five years to accomplish this repeal, even if two-thirds of the Congress and three-fourths of the states vote in favor of it. While if thirteen states out of the forty-eight are opposed to the repeal, it will never be accomplished at all.

Therefore, it can easily be seen how a patriotic interest in politics on the part of the bootlegging industry and allied industries would do a lot of good.

The thing for bootleggers, et al to worry about is the proposal to modify the Volstead act so as to permit the distribution by government of light wines and beers.

This would be legal and the Supreme Court, with such respect for public sentiment as it displayed in the slavery cases, would probably declare it constitutional.

THEN THERE WOULD BE genuine and immediate danger to the bootlegging business and allied interests. Then the speakeasy would be eliminated along with the saloon. Then decent, healthful beverages would take the places of powerful and poisonous hard liquors.

Then we would have real temperance and the cranks and criminals would together disappear.

However, if both parties postpone action on the liquor question for five years or more, there will be two presidential campaigns in that period, with plenty of opportunity for patriotic political activity in the shape of campaign contributions. Consequently there is actually no more immediate danger to the bootlegging business and the hi-jacking business and the kidnaping business and the blackmailing business and the racketeering business and the ancient and honorable profession of gang murder than there is to the stock swindling business and the crooked banking business.

And Heaven knows there is no danger there.

KISTLER TO QUIT IF ROOSEVELT WINS FIGHT

National Committeeman to Give Guffey Free Rein in State; May Yet Gain Power

By MARK SHIELDS
Political Editor

CHICAGO, June 28.—Sedgwick Kistler, Democratic national committeeman from Pennsylvania, intends to resign should Franklin D. Roosevelt be nominated for president by the national convention now in session. The Roosevelt nomination, in the eyes of Kistler, will put control of the Democratic party in Pennsylvania completely in the hands of Joseph F. Guffey, of Pittsburgh, and Kistler intends in that event to turn over management to the Pittsburgher.

Already Guffey has seized control of the state committee through the elevation of Warren Van Dyke as state chairman, ousting the former state leader, John Collins, a Kistler man.

GUFFEY IN CONTROL

Guffey is backing Roosevelt in the convention. Kistler is and has been for Al Smith and his leadership, ready to follow anywhere the 1928 standard-bearer might direct. His theory is that, should Roosevelt be the nominee, Guffey might as well be in complete control, and, as one of his friends expressed it, "the tail may as well go with the hide."

If Roosevelt is not the nominee, however, and the question is a most uncertain one today, Kistler, even though Van Dyke is the state chairman, will be the real party head in Pennsylvania, and the chairmanship of Van Dyke is expected to fade quickly.

VOTE UNCERTAIN

The Pennsylvanians went into today's session of the convention with the division uncertain as to how the vote would split between Senator Thomas F. Walsh, of Montana, Roosevelt candidate, and Jouett Shouse, Smith candidate, for permanent chairman. Guffey predicted Walsh would have a substantial majority, probably 55 votes, and there seemed little doubt but that the Pennsylvanians would favor the Montana Senator.

Decision of Roosevelt not to press for elimination of the two-thirds rule at the beginning of balloting for a presidential nominee, may cause some revision of the lineup in Pennsylvania on the subject. Guffey had claimed 52 votes for majority rule on the nomination, while Kistler had said it looked like an even proposition to him.

CONVENTION 'SUSPICIOUSLY' CALM, BRISBANE DECLARES

LACK OF FIRE AT OPENING OMINOUS

Mention of Anti-Dry Plank Causes Only Excitement; Platform Fight Forecast

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

CHICAGO STADIUM, June 28. — The Democratic convention's first session is over.

It was suspiciously calm and smooth. When Democrats do not fight, they are sick. Evangeline Booth, opened with prayer, lasting ten minutes, which is longer than usual. She wore the Salvation Army uniform, no bonnet, brown hair tied in a knot at the back of her neck. Worn by a worldly woman it would be called a psyche knot.

STAR SPANGLED HIGH NOTES

We then stood reverently for the "Star Spangled Banner." Many in Wall street, New York, and La Salle street, Chicago, like to be told that the banner still waves.

Madame Rose Zulaiam sang, and it's a pity you missed it. In the first place, she knew the words all the way through, nobody with an ordinary American name knows them. She was able to sing the lowest notes and highest notes, without straining the muscles of her neck. And, just to show them, she sang one verse a full octave higher than was necessary. At that point Will Rogers, who had sung along with her, mumbling, after the first verse, quit, with rather a mean look.

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of "the Great Commoner," freed from the shackles of Congress, sat among the newspaper workers. She is writing for the Hearst press, and seems happy. Why work for the unappreciative peepul when you can find an employer that knows good work when he sees it?

At the top of her dark hat, right in front, she wore a fair sized donkey, in diamonds, not harnessed. No, Raskob had NOT given it to her, she is NOT Diamond Lil, and the donkey is not made of REAL diamonds. Be sure to read what she writes.

It is unnecessary to tell you that Dixie, now played, by the band was mingled with wild shouts. Nobody knows what causes the wild cries, but they always go with that song.

Next came "My Old Kentucky Home," beautiful, also appropriate, since it includes the words "hard times come knocking at the door."

SONG LOOSENS COMPLEXES

Having sung loudly, freeing various complexes, you relax and look about. And, looking, you ask yourself "is this a Democratic convention, or am I in the Tannhaeuser Venusberg?"

There stands Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, telling nine delegates what to do and how to do it. There, in a comfortable seat is Miss Bessie Marbury, entirely surrounded by important New York politicians, all listening. She is a delegate, as good as they, and a great deal better.

Yonder sits Miss Charlotte Noland, of Middleburg, Va. You may not know who she is, but every girl and mother knows. She is the head of the Foxcroft School, and is taking over a pack of foxhounds, in addition to other teaching. Being M. F. H. will seem easy, after managing 85 girls. She also is a delegate. Woman is coming into her own, and decidedly.

And nearby, ten tall handsome men listening with bated breath, crowding each other for position, sits Mrs. Greenway, of Arizona, as lovely as a rare orchid, swaying on the branch of a tropical palm. At least, that is how Frank Hitchcock, former postmaster general, describes her. He knows more about real politics than anybody here and ought to know about orchids.

THE KEYNOTE

But there is a voice, and you must hear it, while other orchids wait. Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, is "keynoting."

He does not withhold the fact that "we meet today in the midst of a solemn responsibility." He finds himself in a harassed world, but CHEER UP:

"On the fourth of next March, the nominee of this convention will be inaugurated President of the United States.

After that, presumably, oh joy, oh rapture, although Senator Barkley does not use those words.

The twenty-first page of the speech, which reads as well as it sounds, brings the peroration. That, as you know, comes at the end with some sentiment like "a few more rollings and settings of suns, and the places that knew us shall know is no MORE."

Senator Barkley has a solemn peroration. This is it:

"God of our fathers, in this hour of the nation's travail, amid broken hearts, blasted hopes, faces that are drawn, and feet that are eager for the road to labor and to happiness,
"Be with us yet,
"Lest we forget,
"Lest we forget."

Who broke those hearts? Who blasted those hopes? Who drew those drawn faces? Who made those feet so eager?

You have guessed the answer.

THE REPUBLICANS DID IT.

SHAME ON THEM.

Dems Fool G. O. P. By Opening Meeting During Lunch Hour

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

CHICAGO STADIUM, June 28.—The Democrats pulled a smart caper by opening their convention during dinner hour. That's the only time the Republicans are out of office.

"High noon Chairman Raskob's gavel bounced off the boards and the delegates were on their own.

Not being expected so soon, Jimmy Walker got there on time. We have always claimed that Jimmy should have been the Prince of Wales. The resemblance is startling. Especially at the Liverpool jump.

Somebody started the festivities by swiping Mr. Arthur Brisbane's hat. The size is No. 8. We suspect the Siamese twins are going to use it for a parasol.

The Tennessee delegation voted for good beer in their hotel yesterday. Sorry, boys, but hotel voting does not count.

Gov. Ritchie reported the loss of a pocketbook containing $300. Finder will please pay the income tax on it.

A tough Republican said this wasn't a political convention, but an unemployment meeting. If he is right it is the fault of the tough Republicans.

Senator Barkley tore off the usual keynote speech. It was three hours long and a minute wide.

The opening day of the convention goes down in history as an afternoon with Senator Barkley.

The Southern delegates wear white linen coats and pants. After 10 minutes in the stadium they all looked like mussed pillows.

The only question about the prohibition plank is whether its going to be an ironing or a surfboard. This 2.75 business is retrogression. Why should we go back where we were in 1920?

A radish speech is one where the orator gets the razzberry and yells, "gentlemen, I repeat."

Everytime Garfield tried to repeat the audience beat him to it. They did the repeating.

KEYNOTE TALK TOO BRIEF, SAYS GIBBONS

Democrats Declare No Man Can Cite G. O. P. Failings In One Two-Hour Talk

By FLOYD GIBBONS

CHICAGO, June 28.—Hello everybody.

Hope that little girl in the white organdie dress, who sits right in front of me, doesn't get another shock today like she did yesterday.

This battle between "Socker" Jouett Shouse and "Walloping" Tom Walsh was scheduled to be rough and tumble. But I hear they've brought in Marquis of Seabury rules and maybe it will be a little less savage than that elephent-skinning party Senator Barkley staged.

GIRL COMPLAINS

I overheard that little girl say yesterday:

"Mother, isn't it unfair for that man to say all those mean things about the Republicans when their convention is already over and they can't answer back?"

Didn't hear what her mother replied, but I'd like to tell that little girl that she hasn't heard anything yet.

Why, Keynoter Barkley, that bayonet-tongued Kentucky orator, only spoke two hours. Any Democrat in the Stadium will tell you that he couldn't list all the Republican shortcomings and peccadillos and boners in two hours. That's about the only criticism I heard about the sound-off speech. The Democrats think Alben forgot to mention a lot of things, including responsibility for the Johnstown flood and the seven-year locusts.

Alben did his best, though. When he waded into those administration "chair warmers," he threw everything at 'em but the cook stove. Talked so long that he was getting telegrams of congratulation from the folks back home before he finished. And still he's accused of overlooking some Republican bungling.

Makes no difference whether you're a Democrat or Republican, you've got to admit that Alben put over a keynote speech that had a real key-ring to it. Even if the Democrats don't win in November, that speech will be something for the Republicans to remember them by.

HOMEY CONVENTION

Can't tell just what it is, but everybody feels a little more comfortable at this convention than at the one which adjourned 10 days ago.

Seems to be a little more home-folksy or something.

It's kind of a family affair—sweet little Southern gals—the only kind left who carry fans—and mothers and kids cluttering up the aisles. Making a good old summertime picture.

Don't mean to say the Democrats aren't taking things seriously. No, sir. But I guess they feel good over having so much ammunition piled up to shoot at the Republicans. You know—that comfortable feeling like when you know the smoke-house it full of hams and the cellar full of apples and potatoes and—well—maybe a barrel of cider.

Seems like they get more of a kick out of the music, too. Caught some of the visitors in the gallery seats singing right out loud several times for no reason at all.

A TAMMANY COUNCIL OF WAR ON THE SCENE OF BATTLE . . . EX-GOV. SMITH TRYING TO CONVINCE NEW YORK'S WALKER

By LOUIS SEIBOLD
Universal Service.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Realignment on all sectors of the battle for the presidential nomination is preceding actively.

The Roosevelt strategy, revised to meet an entirely new situation, was obviously being directed to prevent shrinkage in the impending test over the permanent chairmanship and for the prize which the Governor wants.

The tactics manifest from the maneuvering among promoters of independent candidacies was patiently designed to raid the Roosevelt preserves.

EFFECT AWAITED

The actual effect of the Governor's startling retreat in the fight over the two-thirds rule will not be determined until the controversy over the permanent chairman's job is reached, probably this afternoon.

Its results will provide a very clear and definite line on the secondary phase of the Roosevelt strategy—the acquisition of the two-thirds vote necessary to nominate.

Farley and other Roosevelt lieutenants continue to assert confidence that they will get the number required. Their confidence is less convincing than it was 24 hours ago.

The immediate objective of the managers of the candidates outside of New York is to destroy the Roosevelt advantage at every turn. The ultimate purpose, of course, is to win the nomination of some man not involved in the bitter feud between the rival New York contenders.

All sorts of claims were made by both the Roosevelt and the anti-groups, most of which seemed to be predicated upon contingencies that may never develop.

FOES ACTIVE

The managers of Garner, Reed, Baker, Byrd, White, Ritchie (and, remotely, Owen D. Young) appeared to concur in the opinion that Gov. Roosevelt would forfeit an undeterminable number of votes and that the presidential nomination would go elsewhere.

Roosevelt's dramatic contribution to the confused situation already prevailing in the Democratic national convention provoked these definite reactions:

1—It manifestly affected the confidence of his most ardent supporters that he will be able to secure 770 of the 1,154 delegate votes necessary to win under the two-thirds rule.

2—It caused chagrin to his supporters throughout the country, who were spoiling for a fight over the rules.

The suddenness with which Governor Roosevelt moved swept a good deal of the underpinning from under his boom.

Comments distinctly unfriendly to the Governor flavored the disappointment expressed by his supporters who wanted to see him fight it out, confident that he would finally win.

At the same time Farley and the other Roosevelt leaders were inclined to regard the Governor's astounding action as merely designed to meet the immediate situation.

A great many of the Roosevelt leaders feel that having embarked in a fight they should go through with it regardless of the consequences.

Contrary to the view of Mr. Roosevelt, this determination, which appeared to be growing last night, is predicated on the belief that the effect of Roosevelt's personal opinion will be merely to defer a test that they feel will arise if (1) he fails to get the necessary two-third in the early balloting and (2) in the event of a dog fight such as that of 1924.

Tunney at Training Camps Of Democratic Battlers

By GENE TUNNEY

CHICAGO, June 28.—Though the convention officially opened yesterday with Senator Alben W. Barkley's keynote speech and the election of committees, the real fireworks begin today as far as those who have traveled to Chicago for a ringside seat at the great Democratic battle of the century are concerned. The keynoter started a spontaneous commotion when he referred to the possible repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment; and derogatory allustions to President Hoover brought occasional rounds of applause and snickers.

However, these displays were not at all satisfying to the bloodthirsty who expect nothing short of a knock-'em-down-and-drag-'em-out fight. Even the leaders fear that an "ask no quarter, grant no quarter" fight cannot be avoided. The atmosphere is rife with impending strife, as Bugs Baer puts it.

In the company of a few friends I made the rounds of the training quarters. We were informed by members of various retinues that the candidates were out on the road putting in the final touches for the contest that starts today and lasts until—well, until "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, Senator James Reed, of Missouri; Gov. Byrd, of Virginia, and Gov. Ritchie, of Maryland, were those who were reported to be conscientiously tapering off for the fight. We were advised at the Roosevelt headquarters that the leading contender was confining his prebattle moments to "shadow" boxing at the Albany mansion.

BOWERS LAUDS ROOSEVELT IN PEACE MOVE

Action Ending Rules Battle Paves Way for Harmony; No Bitterness in Race

By CLAUDE G. BOWERS
International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Another day of sheer drama. It began with the formal opening of the convention, it reached its climax during the session with the announcement whispered about the hall that Roosevelt had instructed his followers to abandon the fight for the abrogation of the two-thirds rule.

The decision to make a fight for abrogation at this juncture was a tactical error and was not approved by many of the foremost Roosevelians.

The action of the New York caucus the night before had thrown a white light on the reaction. An amazing caucus—a free caucus—and free to anyone who cared to wander in from the streets. Curry was loudly applauded when he entered, shaking hands as he smilingly made his way to the front. Smith was greeted with lusty cheers. But the ovation was reserved for the entry of Mayor Walker. Then Dan Cohalen offered his resolution against abrogation. The debate was on. The climax came when John W. Davis took the floor for the Cohalen resolution.

SENTIMENT HOSTILE

The roll was called. There was no attempt to influence anyone's opinion. As prominent Roosevelians voted for the resolution it was evident that the sentiment of the Empire State was hostile to abrogation.

Late at night the rumor ran through the various presidential headquarters that a poll, unofficial but careful, revealed a majority of 100 against the abrogation of the rule.

The statement of Roosevelt, dignified and in good temper, ordered the cessation of firing in the interest of harmony and to end the charge that his camp had been guilty of "bad sportsmanship." He is entitled to credit for having removed one serious bone of contention. After June comes November.

CONVENTION UNBOSSED

During the day and night the managers of the various candidates were kept constantly on needles and pins by disturbing reports that some of their men were slipping. One thing about this convention thus far that impresses me is the evident determination of individual delegates to use their own judgment. This is an unbossed convention.

There will be no repetition of the Madison Square Garden convention under any circumstances. The delegates of no particular importance are determined to take matters into their own hands if the leaders bungle.

I have observed a very gratifying difference between the temper of the candidates here and at the New York convention. Eight years ago they were keyed to a high pitch of excitement and rage. Nothing of the sort here.

As I said, Smith is calm, his sense of humor keen as ever; Byrd, from all appearances, might be a mere spectator of an interesting show. Last night I talked with Ritchie in his rooms, and he was unruffled, without a suggestion of excitement or ill-feeling toward anyone, and Gov. Murray, whom I visited, seemed more interested in Jeffersonian literature than in battle. It was midnight when I met Senator Reed, of Missouri, looking very tired, but every inch the fighter still.

Maine 'Stein Song' Convention Keynote

By DAMON RUNYON

Remember?

"Dree-hink a toast to dear old May-hain—dree-hink 'till the rafters re-hing-gah."

The organist at the Chicago stadium, a most discerning man, kept tottling the melody made famous by Rudy Vallee for upwards of 20 minutes yesterday afternoon, inspiring Democratic feet to fantastic shuffling over the concrete floor behind their state banners in a big demonstration in favor of steins, seidels, mugs and maybe mere glasses.

SUSTAINED OUTBURST

It was the first real sustained outburst of the delegates to the Democratic convention and was brought on by Senator Alben W. Barkley, a fiery Kentuckian, temporary chairman and official keynoter, when he finally got down to brass tacks, and started putting a boost in for old John Barleycorn.

John is the real issue of this notable assemblage of ladies and gentlemen from all parts of these United States.

Senator Barkley was the better of two hours getting to the point, what with lingual detours of one kind and another, the point being a forthright demonstration that the party platform call for the repeal of Mr. Volstead's favorite amendment, immediately, if not sooner.

When the Senator eventually arrived at the point, the convention boiled up suddenly, and spilled enthusiasm all around and about, with the organist giving his all in the Maine stein song.

Some one remembered that Senator Barkley, who ribbed up all the racket, was once a dry. He was wringing wet yesterday—with perspiration. His glowing words seeped right through his white linen clothes.

BANNERS FLOAT PAST

The banners of the various states floated past the speakers stand on a roaring stream of enthusiasm for a high alcoholic content and Senator Barkley watched the river with tired eyes.

He had a right to be tired. He talked so long he had the delegates groggy with words, until he revived them again with his declaration for repeal, like slapping 'em suddenly in the face with a wet bar towel.

Here come some Tammanyites. They look sleepy. The Tammanyites think they are camping out in the wilds, and many of them sat up all night fearful of an attack from the Indians.

Flashlights pop all over the hall. Alfalfa Bill Murray, the Governor of Oklahoma, and a presidential candidate, comes in with his old-fashioned handlebars moustache waggling.

William Randolph Hearst, Jr., pops into the press section, or "gallery" as the tickets read, and gazes at his hard-working vassals with a grin. He is a symphony in brown, with a most adroit charvet tie around his throat.

His mother, Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, chairman of New York's famous milk fund, is in a box with Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Slater and Mrs. Herbert Bayard Swope.

Gov. White Hurries To Convention Scene

CHICAGO, June 28.—(AP.)—Gov. George White, of Ohio, arrived early today to aid his managers in directing his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The Governor changed his plans, not to attend, late yesterday after Chairman Henry G. Brunner, of the Ohio delegation, telephoned him. Brunner considered the chances for the Governor's nomination considerably enhanced when Gov. Roosevelt, of New York, gave up his fight for abrogation of the two-thirds rule.

Listeners-In Urged To Demand Repeal

CHICAGO, June 28.—(AP.)—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, urged a nation-wide radio audience last night to communicate at once with delegates to the Democratic national convention insisting that the party go forth to campaign "fully equipped" on the issue of prohibition repeal.

Ritchie said it was a mistake ever to have put the Eighteenth Amendment in the constitution and that the welfare of the people and the cause of temperance would best be served by "rectifying this mistake."

RASKOB TO LOSE HIS 'INTEREST'

the head of this great charity organization to have picked her, for the Democrats are much nearer the Salvation Army than the Republicans. And evidently being a Democrat, Miss Booth prayed very long and very earnestly. She dident read her prayer, which was an improvement over all the men preachers.

The Democrats always sing the Star Spangled Banner. The Republicans never sing (till after election). The lady singer knew both verses and I was just starting to write about her complimenting her when I found she had notes and was reading from them.

Next come Mayor Cermak, of Chicago. He beat 'em all to the name of Thomas Jefferson. (It's always a race with the Democrats to see which speaker can mention Jefferson first.) Well, Cermak drew the first blood of the Democratic national convention by grabbing Jefferson early. It was awfully timely the way he dragged him in. He said, "Chicago and Thomas Jefferson had much in common; they both loved liberty."

The Mayor said, "The next President has not been named yet." Did he mean that there is no name that Herbert Hoover hasent yet been called? But the Mayor made a good speech.

Now comes California. Isadore Dockweiler read Thomas Jefferson's first inaugural address. It wasn't so long. That ought to have been a tip right there to the other speakers if they were true disciples of Jefferson.

Now comes Senator Barkley with the "keynote?" What do you mean "note?" This was no note. This was in three volumes. Barkley leaves from here to go to the Olympic game to run in the marathon. He will win it too for that race only lasts three or four hours.

But it had to be a long speech for when you start enumerating the things that the Republicans have got away with in the last 12 years you have cut yourself out a job.

He just touched on the highlights of their devilment. He dident have time to go into detail. This is one keynote speech you can forgive the length for when you jot down our ills you got to have a lot of paper. He had it all over the Republican keynoter for this fellow was reading facts while the other fellow had to read "alibis."

Barkley did a fine job of delivery, and too, he was on his feet at the finish.

draws you, reminding you of that story about the maelstrom that would pull down a ship.

Carried by the crowd, you reach the sign SMITH and look at three rooms jammed, with at least as many women as men. Mayor Hague, of Jersey City, is going in, and you pass through the hole that he makes in the crowd, as the Cromagnon or Neanderthal person followed in the wake of the mammoth.

Through one room packed through another room packed into a third room not packed, through a door beside which Mrs. Smith, wife of the former Governor, is sitting with Mrs. Mooney. Beyond the door sits Gov. Smith, at a desk, his faithful cigar not far away.

He is out for HIMSELF, as he has said, not for anybody else. He does not believe that anybody will break the two-thirds rule. And before the day ended news came that Gov. Roosevelt will not try to break it.

Gov. Smith is in good spirits. He has been fighting for 40 years, usually winning. This fight will be hard. He knows it. Today he has not a delegate pledged South of the Mason and Dixon line, or west of the Mississippi River.

Nevertheless, in 1928 he got six million more votes than any Democrat ever got before, and will keep on fighting, not from a distance, but from the convention floor. The school in which he was raised believes in being on the spot.

THE IMPRESSION you get, hearing all sides, is that beating Gov. Roosevelt is going to be a hard task, even for these most experienced politicians. Democrats think they can win this time. They know that Gov. Roosevelt has many delegates. The band wagon may start any moment. Why delay? Why not climb up?

RELIEF BIGGEST ISSUE SAYS M'ADOO

Party Must Not Pussyfoot On Distress of Common People, He Declares

(Editor's Note—The following interview with William G. McAdoo was obtained by Elsie Robinson, noted newspaper feature writer, who is doing special articles on the Democratic National Convention for International News Service.)

By ELSIE ROBINSON
International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 28.—William Gibbs McAdoo believes that there is something more important than the Democratic convention . . . that there is an issue more vital and fraught with danger than prohibition, tariff or international debt. And that issue is the terrible distress of the common people of America.

He is convinced that unless those common people receive more than a perfunctory gesture of sympathy from the Democratic platform—this party or any other party will be licked.

NO CAMPAIGN SPEECH

And he doesn't mean maybe! Nor was he making a campaign speech.

It was one of those rare moments that aren't programmed. Three a. m.—In a big room on top of the Sherman Hotel in Chicago, through which excited delegates and fretty committeemen still streamed. Outside the city slept—blue veiled, star spangled, very lovely. Very awful. For, beneath that glimmering veil, millions prowled awake and hungry and bitter with despair.

Somehow he's managed to get away from the crowd for a moment and stood, leaning against the window, looking down.

"What are you thinking about, Mr. McAdoo?"

Politics, of course, would be the answer. But, amazingly, it wasn't. He said:

"I'm thinking of them—down there. Wondering what's going to happen to them—and what's going to happen to America—if they're not helped."

"But aren't the Democrats going to fix all that?"

The question was light. His answer wasn't:

"Are they? I wonder. They could. Politics has always held tremendous power—"

"Doesn't it now?"

POWER OF POLITICS

A long and not a political silence.

"Yes, politics still has power if it will stop making big medicine and tackle the real problems that confront us.

"I am not now referring to the problems created by the Eighteenth Amendment, the tariff, the international debt. These problems are important. They must be settled. Particularly the dangerous problem of our foreign relations must be met.

"But there is something more important than these problems—something that should be considered before these—and that is the need of the American people for food and work—their right to be helped—their inevitable despair and fury unless they are helped.

"The Republicans shushed off that problem and went through the old, futile maneuvers—trying to hoodwink the people.

"They will not admit that America is facing the most dangerous hour in its history. And they have not offered one single measure to meet that danger.

"I am a loyal Democrat. I believe in my party. I am laboring for its interests. But if this convention tries to shush off American need as the Republicans shushed it off with pretty speeches . . . If they nominate a man who is a mere figure head for the old machine maneuverings, then the Democrats will go down to defeat as the Republicans have gone down to defeat."

Women Active at Convention

By RUTH BRYAN OWEN
Member of Congress and Daughter of William Jennings Bryan
(Copyright, 1932, Universal Service, Inc.)

CHICAGO, June 28.—The Democratic convention is off to a flying start. The flags are flying, the bands are playing and the theme song seems to be "God's in His Heaven and all's going to be well with the world when the next president goes in."

Before the crowd at the Stadium had been called to order yesterday, Democratic women to the number of 3,000 had breakfasted in the grand ballroom of the Stevens with enough noise and enthusiasm to carry the party to victory.

Elizabeth A. Conkey, national committeewoman from Illinois, introduced a number of us for short speeches.

FROCKS DEMOCRATIC

Gov. Ross was loyally Democratic in a smart frock and hat of navy blue. Emily Newell Blair also proved that one can be political and chic at the same time. Mrs. Carroll Miller, of Pittsburgh, had color and charm in her ensemble of white coral and blue as well as color and wit in her rousing speech.

Over at the Stadium here was feminine Democracy among the box holders who were finding their places to the music of the great organ. In the glare of batteries of powerful floodlights Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, a gracious and distinguished figure in a costume of black and white, sat near Mrs. Cary Grayson looking charming in wine red georgette.

ALL ARE KEYNOTERS

Mrs. Al Smith, in smart costume and furs of brown, was the center of another group. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, whose becoming purple frock was relieved with touches of white, watched this convention with keen interest.

Everyone was striking keynotes, not only Senator Barkley who had the task of recounting the shortcomings of the Republican party, and did so with completeness and zest, but all the other speakers.

5 Ohioans Injured In $300,000 Blaze

TOLEDO, O., June 28.—(AP.)—With damage estimated at $300,000, fire destroyed a three-story brick building in the downtown business section here early today, and injured five persons, none of them seriously. An explosion preceded the blaze.

The structure, located on Superior street near Madison avenue, was occupied by the Western Auto Supply Company and the Weed-Coburn Company, manufacturers of caps and gloves.

Straw Hat Shocks House of Commons

LONDON, June 28.—(AP.)—Maj. de Spencer Robertson, who up to this time has been a pretty regular member of the Conservative party, gave his associates a shock today when he walked to his seat in the House of Commons wearing a straw hat.

People don't wear straw hats in England, and so far as anybody could remember, this was the first time one had appeared in the Commons, that deliberative body whose members may wear their hats while the session is in progress.

DANIELS CITES DEMOCRATIC STAMPEDES

Enthusiastic Donkey Holds Right to Kick Up Heels; Good Show Assured

By JOSEPHUS DANIELS
Former Secretary of Navy
(Copyright, 1932, Universal Service, Inc.)

CHICAGO, June 28.—The Democrats always put on a good show, particularly when they come to Chicago. Whatever else they do, Democrats will not tolerate a dull time. Enthusiasm is their first name.

Another thing about Democrats is that each one is a law unto himself. They believe in freedom of speech and exercise it, sometimes to a degree that impedes quick action. Every Democrat claims to be the equal of every other one and proves it.

KICK UP HEELS

Leaders may make a program and your average Democrat thinks he is showing his independence when he smashes it. The donkey loves to kick up his heels.

This is the third Democratic convention that has been pulled off within the past 40 years in Chicago. The first two were the stormiest on record.

There are a few—very few—Democrats in this convention who were here in the old barn where Cleveland was nominated, in 1892. There has hardly been a speech so dynamic as was made here in 1892 by Bourke Cochran, who, as spokesman for the New York delegation threatened party defeat if it overrode the opposition of New York to Cleveland. Never was a more vitriolic Philippic delivered against any candidate than Bourke Cochran uttered against Cleveland.

RECALLS STAMPEDE

It made a profound impression and might have resulted in defeat for Cleveland, but for one thing. And that one thing was one sentence in an address by Gov. Bragg, of Wisconsin. Turning to the Tammany delegation, which had been noisy and offensive to Cleveland, Gov. Bragg, in tones that reached the farthest corner of the auditorium, said:

"We love him for the enemies he has made."

Gov. Bragg could get no further. In one sentence, Bragg had demolished Cochran's effort. Cleveland was nominated, carried New York and was elected.

What like eloquence will thrill this convention? Will somebody follow Bragg and stampede this convention? The opening day gave no hint of who might make this convention a third historic one.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

At last June has lived up to its reputation for weddings. Yesterday brought a charming bride, a church wedding with so many folks attending that some of the members of the "400" had to stand in the vestibule and a pretty bridal party.

The reception at the bride's home after the ceremony was kept small, according to the depression custom, but the church service was as impressive as the most romantic could wish.

Frances Reed, daughter of Mrs. James Hay Reed, Jr., and a niece of Senator David Aiken Reed, was the attractive bride, and James Chambers McKay, son of the Thomas Jefferson McKays, was the bridegroom. Officiating at the service, taking place at 5:30 o'clock in the Shadyside Presbyterian Church, was the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr.

Flower Setting

Hydrangeas and rose-hued peonies against a background of ferns and bamboo shoots formed the setting for the ceremony. The bride's gown of ivory satin was quaintly distinctive. The dress was cut high at the neckline in heart-shaped lines, made with long, tight-fitting sleeves and the long train fell from the hip-line. Marking the waist and the edge of the long skirt was a band of narrow pleating of the same satin. Her veil of tulle cascaded from a cap of lace decorated in the back with orange blossoms. She carried a sheaf of calla lilies.

The bridal party was all in blue and yellow. Katherine Frazer as her cousins' maid of honor was in creamy yellow chiffon, made with a bertha in front forming brief cape sleeves, a high waistline marked by a girdle of yellow and pale, soft blue taffeta.

In Blue Chiffon

And their hats were most picturesque, large floppy leghorn affairs trimmed with blue velvet ribbon with bows ending in streamers falling from one side of the hat to the shoulder. The maid of honor's hat was trimmed with yellow velvet to match her gown.

Thomas Jefferson McKay, Jr., was his brother's best man, and Joel Wakeman Burdick II, John Hartwell Hillman III, Charles Lewis Flaccus, Jr., James McKay, cousin of the bridegroom, Rowland Erving, William A. Robinson III, Malcolm Hay, cousin of the bride; Lawrence McKay, brother of the bridegroom, all of Pittsburgh; and John Creighton, of South Orange, N. J.; Harry G. Bartol, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Gouverneur Morris Phelps, Jr., of New York, and Charles Meredith DuPuy, of Indianapolis, Ind., were ushers.

Gowns of Mothers

The mother of the bride wore deep lavender chiffon and a hat to match, and a corsage of orchids, and the mother of the bridegroom, a green and beige printed crepe with a jacket to match, trimmed with beige fox, and a large black straw hat.

At the reception in the Reed home which followed the ceremony, vases of American beauty roses decorated the home. The bride's table was all in white and green, with white roses and white garden flowers used with ferns. White tapers lighted the table.

Now I want to name a few of the many smartly-gowned guests at the wedding. In a group of Sewickley girls were Rosamond Fitch in a brown and white splashy print and a large brown straw hat, Rebecca Doyle, Madelaine Alexander in green, Caroline Crittenden in powder blue crepe with the neckline having a deep v-shaped border of narrow blue crepe bands on blue net.

In Light Brown

Elizabeth Childs wore a light brown crepe dress with white net at the neck and sleeves, Mrs. W. L. Mellon, Jr., chose a powder blue crepe dress with long sleeves and a hat of darker blue straw, Marie Louise Bickford was in a beige eyelet batiste dress over chartreuse green with a girdle of green and a green-banded beige straw hat.

Mrs. W. W. Blair, Jr., wore a navy blue and white plaid crepe frock, Mrs. T. M. Jones III, a navy blue crepe suit with blue and white striped collar, Mrs. Herbert A. May, Jr., was in brown and white, Mary Franklin Robinson in a paddy green suit with a green and white blouse and a green hat.

Tall Caroline Mitchell was striking in eggshell crepe with a cape of the same material and a large straw hat, Mrs. James McKay wore black and white chiffon, Mrs. Nelson Vance Harper, red and white chiffon with a red hat, and her mother, Mrs. Wallace Hurtte Rowe, powder blue crepe with a hat to match.

Wearing Chiffon

Black and white chiffon was worn by Susan O'Neil, and a smart suit with a skirt of white crepe and a jacket of navy blue and scarlet by Evelyn Evans. And I saw Sylvia Robertson, Mrs. John F. Walton in a black and white fine-checked crepe dress; Mrs. T. Howe Nimick in a beige printed crepe, Betty McCance was in a red and white print.

Mrs. Leonard S. Mudge chose a black and white costume, Mrs. John W. Lawrence a rose and white chiffon dress, Juliet Hillman arrived with her mother, Mrs. John H. Hillman, Jr.; Mrs. A. Rex Flinn was there, wearing red and white chiffon with a cape-collared jacket to match; Emily Frew in brown and beige printed crepe; Margaret Holdship, Katharine Collin in a navy blue crepe dress with brief white sleeves and a navy blue chapeau, and Lucile Todd in pale beige crepe.

Gowned In Crepes

Attractive indeed was Mrs. Edward Purcell Mellon II, in blue and white printed crepe with a hat to match, Eloise Dorrance in a red and white printed crepe, Frances Johnston in red and white crepe with a large natural colored chip-straw hat.

I saw Mrs. Charles Flaccus, Jane Flaccus, Marjorie Kimball in blue and white print with a leghorn hat, Martha Edmondson in a green and white print, Neil Stewart Zang in rose crepe, Mrs. A. C. Martin in green and orange printed chiffon, Ellen McClay in blue, Mrs. Albert Wells looking charming in a powder blue crepe ensemble.

La Salle Dorrance wore a white silk mesh knit dress with a large white straw hat, Bettie Guiler was there, Mrs. Harold Williams, Mrs. Reginald G. Qualle, Catherine Suydam in orchid and white printed crepe, Mrs. Walter F. Schleiter in beige and brown printed crepe with a lace collar.

A pale green rough crepe dress with accents of brown was worn by Louise Reed, a black and white satin costume by Louise Evans, a white costume by Margaret Brill.

Her father will officiate at the ceremony on Saturday, July 9, at high noon, in his church, the Sixth Presbyterian, when she will wed Dr. A. Vaughn Winchell, of Pittsburgh, son of Dr. Alexander N. Winchell, of Madison, Wis.

Summer Sports Keeping Manhattan Society Busy

NEW YOR—Vacation time to Manhattan's socially prominent means merely a change of scenery for a continued run of big "shows."

Regattas, water carnivals, garden parties, polo, golf, dinner dances, and debutante teas liven the otherwise languid hours of a summer on Long Island, at Newport, R. I., or up in Westchester County.

Those who spend some of their summers in town are already planning for the fall season.

Take the officers of the Society for Improving the Condition of the Poor, Miss Ruth Vanderbilt Twombly and Mrs. Cornelius Bliss, for instance.

Already they are laying the foundations for the second annual Peacock ball to be held November 4, at the Waldorf-Astoria. Assisting them are Mrs. William A. M. Burden, Mrs. Kenneth P. Budd, Mrs. John H. Prentice and Miss Louise Iselin. Edward Paul England III, will undertake personal supervision of the entertainment and decorations for the benefit affair.

Providers for Family Often Given Unfair Treatment

Is it fair for Charlie to have to support the family, when he and the girl friend want to get married?

That's the question that's agitating a lot of youngsters these days; eager youngsters, who long to start living their own lives in their own little nests, as Life intended they should.

And that question has Jade on the run—plenty!

"I just don't know where it's going to end!" she wails. "He has to give them more than half of his salary, and that makes it impossible for him to save anything for our future.

"Of course, there's Brother Bill. He helps a little, but if Charlie walked out—

"I know he never would take over the burden. I know he wouldn't support them!" she continues.

So what can the kids do?

"Dear Miss Martin:

"Well, here's another problem for you. I guess you get plenty of them, and I never thought I'd be coming with mine, but here I am.

"I'm 20. Charlie is 26. We met five and a half years ago and began going together. During the past few years we have learned to love each other dearly. If we were alone in the world, we'd probably be happily married by now. But there's the rub. We're not alone. At least he isn't.

"He has a mother, a sister and a nephew to support. The car, for business, is another item he has to foot. His brother Bill helps some, but if Charles and I were married, Bill wouldn't support the family. I know that well.

QUESTIONS FAIRNESS

"Do you think it is fair of Charles' family to demand support, when they know that he and I are waiting patiently to be married? Do you think it is fair for them to ask Charles for more than half of his salary every week?

"Their doing so makes it utterly impossible for him to save for our future. Do you think it is his duty to let them put this burden on him? He thinks it is; that there is nothing else he can do. But what do you think? What about us? Haven't we any rights?

"JADE."

Yes, I know, youngster. It's pretty tough, isn't it? And you have my sympathy. I don't think it is fair, any more than you do.

But maybe, right now, it is the only thing that can be done. Jobs are mighty scarce, so perhaps the family can't help leaning on Charley.

OTHERS SHOULD HELP

However, there is no reason why sister shouldn't look for a job, and do her part when she can; nor is there any reason why all the weight should fall on Charlie. If Bill is working he should do his part, too. Charlie is entitled to a chance to live his own life.

But if he won't take that chance; if he lets them make a pack horse of him, they'll do it and keep on doing it. That's human nature. So it's up to Charlie to defend his rights, and yours, and demand a showdown.

Would marriage be one way to force a "showdown"? Yes, if you can possibly manage it. But don't go into it until you are sure of Charlie's own attitude toward the whole affair. If you feel that he really wants a new home, and will be loyal to it and fight for it against all demands, then take the chance, Jade.

But if Charlie himself is wobbly; if he can't defend his own rights, then don't expect him to defend yours, and don't risk your happiness by putting your life into his keeping.

Sometimes a man's family is a real pain-in-the-neck, which he would gladly shake. Sometimes it's just a convenient alibi for his own cowardice.

Plain Girl Apt to Inspire More Lasting Love, Fay King Believes

BEAUTY DOES NOT IMPROVE WITH TIME
THOSE ATTRACTED TO BEAUTY ONLY, HAVE A CHANGE OF HEART OFTEN THE PLAIN GIRL WINS A LOVE THAT NEED NOT FEAR THE RIVALRY OF BEAUTY
FAY KING

By FAY KING

A beautiful girl inspires love by her looks.

To see her is to admire her, to wish to know her, and win her if a man can.

A plain girl does not have this advantage of attracting favorable attention from the first.

But when she does interest someone and he falls in love with her for other charms she possesses, I believe the love is more lasting and profound.

The voice, the personality, the qualities which do not compare with beauty at first glance, often can have a greater hold and more lasting charm.

Looks do not improve as do other good qualities.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Proper Diet Is Essential During Convalescence

Many criticize the doctors, claiming they are negligent about giving proper instructions regarding the diet of the sick. In hospital cases the diet is supervised by a trained nurse, who readily understands what the doctor means by a "light diet," a "liquid diet" or a "solid diet." But in the home, these critics say, the doctors should give definite instructions about the diet to be given the patient.

Dr. Copeland

The quality and quantity of food which should be prescribed is determined by the activity of the ailing person. If he lies quietly in bed he does not need as much food as when he is about and working. Nevertheless, the bed-ridden patient must have nourishment, for the body needs energy and heat to aid in the patient's recovery.

For those recovering from infectious diseases, the diet should be light and simple. During the course of the fever most of the foods given are in liquid form. As the fever subsides and disappears, the amount of nutrition should be increased, but this increase should be gradual.

A "liquid diet" does not mean water merely. It includes all nourishing foods in the form of fluids. Milk is the best foundation for a liquid diet, while gruels, broths, and fruit-juices may be added.

When the doctor orders a simple diet he has in mind food that is substantial and nourishing, but easily digested. A simple diet includes milk, eggs, toast, cereals, custards and milk puddings. To this list vegetables fresh fruits and meats may be added gradually. The food should never be forced, and it should be served in a tempting and appetizing manner.

Tonics are not as popular as they used to be. They have been replaced by prescribing certain natural spring waters and carbonated beverages. Most patients convalescing from serious ailments and confined to bed develop a tendency toward constipation. For this reason, stewed fruits and vegetables that have a mild laxative action should be included in the diet.

In serious ailments the diet should be personally supervised by a physician, and the complications of infectious diseases require unusual attention. When the kidneys are involved, as in scarlet fever, a special diet must be prescribed. In diabetes, it is impossible to prescribe the diet until there have been careful and repeated estimations of the amount of sugar present in the urine and blood, and if diet does not alter the underlying diabetes, insulin should be given.

Water is an indispensable part of the convalescent's diet that is often neglected. Bright's disease is the only disease where the amount of water should be limited. Water should be placed beside the bed and the patient encouraged to drink a glass of water every hour. Water aids in diluting the poisons accumulated within the body, and in the proper digestion of other foods.

In disease, certainly, and usually in health, fried and greasy foods should be avoided; salts, peppers, spices and condiments should be used sparingly, and excessive amounts of tea, coffee and alcoholic beverages should be eliminated. Food should be chewed slowly and carefully.

Household Hints

The bread box should be washed, dried and aired once a week to insure its keeping sweet. Even tiny bread crumbs allowed to accumulate in the bottom of the box will cause an unpleasant odor and mold on the larger pieces of bread, so the washing is essential, not just wiping out with a dry cloth.

Most housewives whose locks are straight include as one of their necessary summer expenses a permanent wave. A little outside help is needed to look attractive in the hot weather, and the hot kitchen has no terror for the woman who has had her "summer permanent."

Heart of a Wife

-:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Bill and Frank Volunteer a Plan

Dicky's tone was so confident as he asked me to go out in the couch hammock for 10 minutes, promising to bring me a solution of my extra guests problem in that time, that I felt some of my worry slip away from me.

"I'll go gladly."

"And promise not to worry?" I laughed up into his eyes.

"'Cross my heart and hope to die,'" I said, and he stooped and kissed me quickly.

"That's my own girl," he answered, and went out of the door, while I obediently went to the veranda and stretched myself on the couch hammock. I closed my eyes against the sunlight—and when I opened them again, Dicky was sitting in the chair beside me, smoking and reading. I sat up abruptly.

"How long have I been asleep?" I demanded.

"Twenty-four hours," Dicky responded promptly. "It's tomorrow at this time. But don't worry! I've attended to everything."

"'Gimme, gimme,'" I said laughingly, "you promised."

"Oh! you want the solution of your housing problem. All right, I have it neatly tied up, just outside. I'll send it in to you."

QUESTION ANSWERED

He opened the door, went down the steps, and disappeared round the corner of the house. It was but a minute or two later when Hank and Bill came up to the door of the veranda and crossed to where I was lying. As I saw their faces, eager, affectionate, proud, I knew what solution Dicky had found for my problem.

"Aunt Madge," Bill said, diffidently, "we want to ask a favor of you."

"If it's anything in my power, it's granted before it's asked," I answered, smiling at them.

"We've always wanted to sleep out in the hay, the way we've read about," Bill said. "Some of the boys up at school have done it when they were out in the country. We've got a lot of our traps up there at one end of the haymow. Jim helped us fix up a corner by the window and we've been out there a lot rainy days, but we haven't asked to sleep out there because we thought you might not like it and we didn't want to bother you. But we were speaking to Uncle Dicky about it just now, and he said he was sure you wouldn't mind."

"I don't mind in the least," I told them. "When would you like to change?"

"Today, if you don't mind," Bill said, and from the corner of my eye I saw him nudge Hank.

BOYS WANT EVERYTHING

"I don't mind in the least," I said. "In fact, you have made it possible for me to ask you a favor. Mrs. Underwood telephoned a few moments ago asking me if she could bring Carolyn and Ronald and Bob Trevellon down with Mary and Marion for a few days. I have been wondering where I could put the two boys. But now—would you mind—if I let them have your room while they're here?"

"No. We won't mind a bit," they chorused. "We'll go right up and get our things out of the chiffoniers and wardrobes."

"No, don't do that!" I adjured them. "I'll go up with you now, and we'll sort out the things you'll need for the next few days. We'll give the boys each one drawer of the chiffonier and half the space in your closet. You won't be barred from the room, you know. They'll know that they have your room, and you can go into it, and get anything you want at any time."

Suddenly I was conscious of something electric in the air. A glance of understanding passed between them. Then Bill spoke again, slowly.

"You don't mind if we take all our things out, do you, Aunt Madge?" he asked.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Calling Card

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am to be graduated from high school very soon. I do not care for Miss on my name cards, although I know it is correct. Could I not have just my full name written on them?

2. I have quite a few friends to whom I wish to send announcements, but I do not want them to think they are sent just for a gift. What could I write on the announcements to express this wish? Would the following do—"No presents requested?" W.

1. I wish you would allow me to beg you to reconsider this. You see, dear friend, when you are being graduated from high school, you are observed by your relatives and friends to see if you know the things that a high school graduate should know. You know that the title is correct on your cards, and still you are doing the reverse. Now this does seem a bit perverse, doesn't it? You see, too, if you have these cards done in correct taste, you can use them until . . . until that Prince Charming persuades you to change the MISS for MRS.! So let's have the title engraved before the name . . . yes?

2. You mustn't write any request of this kind on the cards that you send.

The Bride's Attendants

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper for a married person to be a bridesmaid? I have an only sister who is married and who is going to be my matron of honor. One of my best friends is married and I would like to have her as a bridesmaid. I am having three other bridesmaids, who are single. Friends tell me that it would be wrong to ask a married person to be a bridesmaid.

2. Is it incorrect to ask an only sister to be a bridesmaid instead of a maid of honor? I was thinking of asking my best friend to be maid of honor and my sister to be a bridesmaid, but my mother thinks that this would look queer. T.

1. Nowadays no differentiation is made between married and unmarried people as wedding attendants. And this is true of the attendants of the bride as well as of the groom. So by all means ask this good friend of yours to be a bridesmaid.

2. I agree with your mother. It would seem to me, too, that it will be inconsistent to give a friend, even your best friend, a place in your bridal procession of greater honor than the place you give your sister.

Dry Repeal Urged To Save Eyesight

CLEVELAND, June 28.—(AP.)—Repeal of prohibition would keep the sight in the American eye, Dr. Julius Neumiller, chief of the clinic of Pennsylvania State College of Optometry, said today during the thirty-fifth annual Congress of the American Optometric Association.

Prohibition repeal, he noted, would reduce the consumption of beverages containing fusel oil. Good alcohol, he added, does not injure eyesight as much as caffeine or smoking.

Educator Warns Against Wage Cuts

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 28.—(AP.)—Joseph Rosier, president of the State Teachers College at Fairmont, W. Va., today warned the seventieth annual convention of the National Education Association that any drastic lowering of the income and standards of living of the nation's school teachers "would produce most distressing effects upon the basic economic structure." He said:

"Teachers are a group that will not sell America short."

Claudette Colbert plays in "The Man from Yesterday," coming to the Penn screen this Friday.

'White Devil' Is Spectacle Imposing

By GEORGE SEIBEL

You have seldom seen horsemanship, battles and processions equal to those in that film, "The White Devil," shown at the Avenue Cinema this week with English words and Don Cossack music. Though based on one of Tolstoy's early tales, it is close enough to history to be put in that class. For its background is the struggle of Shamyl against the power of the Czar, a struggle that lasted from 1837 to 1859. Here we see Russian armies marching over Caucasian mountain passes, and routed by avalanches of rock hurled down by mines.

Mr. Seibel

Here we are cavalry charges in one of which the hero, the White Devil, spurs his horse to leap clear over the encircling horses and their riders. Here we see scenes in the royal palace and the opera house at St. Petersburg, a wild sleigh-ride through a snow-blizzard, a Moslem wedding ceremony, and more picturesque cities and wild rocky gorges than any tourist publicity bureau ever dreamed of. For scenery and carnage this picture ranks 99.44 per cent, and there is a pretty romance too, though the Czar is rather ludicrous making eyes at the White Devil's girl friend.

As usual, the short features at the Cinema are very good with one exception. The Newman travelogue of the Mediterranean is like a trip from Gibraltar to Athens. "Felix the Cat" cuts some very amusing capers. But Al Wohlman routing Old Man Depression with songs and dances—well, it reminds you of the famous Doctor Coue cooing to an earthquake or a campaign keynoter reading the platform to a flea-circus, or anything incongruous and funny.

Wife Finds Farmer Dead; Killer Sought

APOLLO, Pa., June 28.—State and county police are seeking the slayer of William Kaskan, 50, found dead near his chicken coop in Kiskiminetas Township, near here, yesterday. Mrs. Kaskan told police that her husband heard a noise in the chicken coop and went to investigate. She heard three shots and, being afraid to leave the house, did not find him until yesterday morning.

Mexicans Ordered From Volcano Slope

TOLUCA, Mexico, June 28.—(AP.)—Gov. Filiberto Gomez today ordered all persons living on the upper slopes of the volcano Xinantecatl to evacuate as the result of volcanic activity in the long dormant crater on the high mountain.

A scientific expedition, which started for the crater yesterday, was ordered to turn back.

Man Who Killed 3, Self, Not Ex-Convict

CHICAGO, June 28.—(AP.)—The Associated Press erroneously reported Saturday, June 25, that Roy Parks, who shot and killed his wife, his son and Mrs. Barbara Endre and then committed suicide was an ex-convict.

The information was obtained from the Chicago police. Matt Miller, brother-in-law of Parks, says the information was incorrect. The Associated Press is glad to make this correction.

Studio Plans Crawford Film

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, June 28.

Although Joan Crawford is too thrilled over her first trip to Europe to think much about pictures now, the studio already is preparing a vehicle against her return.

It is another idea from the prolific Edmund Goulding, who dashed off the plot in spare moments on the set. Eddie calls his story "Lost." Opening up in the stockyards district of a great city, it relates a girl's conquest of sordid environment.

As Goulding is busy directing Marion Davies, the job of preparing the screen treatment has been given to Becky Gardiner.

Joan Crawford

In the meanwhile Joan and Doug Fairbanks, Jr., are preparing to leave here tonight or tomorrow for a six weeks' vacation in Europe. It is that trip they have been planning so long and Joan tells me she can hardly wait to start. Both she and Doug, Jr., will see their new pictures today and, if there are no retakes, will grabb the first train to New York. They plan to sail either on the Bremen or the Majestic.

On their itinerary are visits to England, Paris and, if they have time, to Rome. Several days will be spent at Noel Coward's country place. Other friends whom they expect to see are Ivor Novello and Heather Thatcher, the English actress, who was in Hollywood until a few months ago. Joan tells me she will try to persuade Heather to come back with them for another try at a screen career.

BOULEVARD TALK

Anna Sten, whom United Artists contends will be another foreign sensation, is married to Dr. Eugene Franke, an architect, who is noted for his Frank Lloyd Wright type of buildings in Germany . . . Zeppo Marx was lunching at Al Levy's tavern the other noon with Jetta Goudal. . . At the Cocoa-Nut Grove a few hours later, Genevive Tobin and Ralph Graves were dining together . . . Also Geneva Mitchell with Lowell Sherman . . . S. O. S. to Groucho Marx. I lost those three gags you gave me. How about some more? . . . America has a new citizeness in Maria Alba, the Latin beauty who plays Doug Fairbanks' heroine in his South Sea picture . . . Even in these days, people still write about horses. Claude King, one time major in the British Royal Artillery and more lately a Hollywood character actor, has completed a book called "Horse Sense for Amateurs" . . . Quite a few people are head-achy today from the party John P. Medbury gave Saturday night to Olson and Johnson and Burns and Allen . . . I can't forget seeing that Pekingese sitting up to a table in the M. G. M. Commissary and lapping up a cup of tea.

SOME EPITAPHS

For a pleasant evening of laughs, this department recommends Homer Croy's collection of epitaphs, which have just been published under the title of "The Last Word." Some of the epitaphs are actual, and others written for themselves by living celebrities.

Marie Dressler would have on her tombstone:

And, for the funniest, I nominate W. C. Field's whimsy:

"On the whole, I'd rather be in Philadelphia."

Many problems face Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the filming of Pearl S. Buck's best-seller, "The Good Earth." In all probability, Irving Thalberg will have to go off the lot to find players for the story.

If report be true, however, the director will be an M. G. M. ace, probably Clarence Brown. At this writing, Clarence is flying around Europe in his own plane. He isn't due back for some weeks yet.

Paul Tremaine and his orchestra of 15 pieces will play for dancing at Palm Garden tonight only. Walker Moore's orchestra will return to this South Hills pavilion Saturday evening.

DARK COAT WITH WHITE TOUCH CHIC

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, June 28. — Paris has never yet found any more all-'round success than the dark dress, marked with touches of white. White pique collars, white taffeta scarfs, white satin hats and white gloves continue to hold forth in the best of company, despite any other color propaganda that the French dressmakers may take up.

THIS YEAR'S version of the dark-with-white dress has its own 1932 idiosyncrasies; it has developed certain new mannerisms in the way the two contrasts are combined. For example, many coats, made without collars, are designed to be worn with dresses whose white collars appear outside the coat. Often there are white cuffs with no collar, or white collar without cuffs. Today's sketch illustrates one way of using white trimming.

* * *

THE COAT, from Worth, is of lightweight black woolen and looks very much like a dress. Its fastening is made, by means of ties and bows, sharply to the left, at the natural waistline. The collar is of white pique and is provided with eight buttonholes by which it is easily attached to the coat's eight gold shoulder buttons.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Too True To Be Good," Bernard Shaw's latest play, which will be given three times at the Malvern festival in England in August, was heavily cut when it was presented recently in Warsaw, Poland, for the first time in Europe. The state watches such things over there, and Shaw's pacifist ideas were censored. The line, "to be honest means to remain poor and despised," was too Bolshevistic to be allowed to be spoken on the stage of the Theater Polski. Knocks on both religion and atheism were deleted.

Jack Woolley, graduate of Tech Dramatic School, is home from New York, where he has played for two seasons in the Children's Theater, operated by Adrienne Morrison. A little later Mr. Woolley will go to Dennison University, Ohio, to appear in a number of summer plays. He plans to return to New York in the fall.

Pauline Frederick, who has hopped from stage to screen and back again as often as anybody we know of, is playing in summer stock down near New York, where she tried her hand at both acting and directing last season without causing any high excitement.

* * *

George White's "Scandals" of the last season will take to the road again in the fall, for 14 weeks, with all of the original cast except R. Vallee . . . Brian Aherne, young English actor playing Robert Browning in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," turned down several screen offers while the company was in Los Angeles . . . Irving Pichel, one of the Pittsburgh boys who made good in Hollywood, will be seen in the film, "After the Rain," along with Peggy Shannon, Spencer Tracy and William Boyd . . . "Recklessness," by Eugene O'Neill, will be produced as a photoplay under the title, "Gambling in Souls" . . . "A Plain Man," play by Sophie Kerr, story writer, will have its premiere tonight in Pasadena, Cal., with Louise Dresser and William Farnum in the leads . . . Two sons of famous fathers will be in "The Last Frontier," in which Creighton Chaney, Lon's son, will be the lead in a company including Francis X. Bushman, Jr. . . . Roland Young, who recently returned from England where he did some screen acting, will soon be back in Hollywood . . . Richard Barthelmess and family are expected to arrive in New York today, en route to Europe for a holiday.

Dry Worker Slain, W. Va. Druggist Held

WELCH, W. Va., June 28.—(AP.)—Ell Watkins, 51, for 10 years a colorful figure in the State Prohibition Department, was shot to death in a drug store at Bradshaw near here yesterday.

Robert K. Hawkins, proprietor of the drug store, surrendered to a deputy sheriff, was brought to Welch and waived hearing. He was released under $15,000 bond to await grand jury action. Hawkins refused to say anything to officers about the killing.

BITS OF LIFE
All in a Day
By Mark Hellinger

Promoter Joey

LITTLE JOEY is what we of Broadway are pleased to term a promoter. The reason is simple and the title speaks for itself. Joey will promote anything that promises some return for himself. He will step into anything that might call for promotion and, when times are very tough, he will spend most of his time promoting meals for himself. Accordingly, it is obvious that he never steps out of character.

Not that Joey is a bad guy. Not by any means. If he had a million, he'd toss it away in no time—and he'd never forget those who were kind to him. But he had no million. And he had no thousand. And there were plenty of occasions when he had no dime. So he had to be content with tales of what he would do if he had plenty of money. Remember the old German proverb, "the poorer the man, the bigger the heart?"

As far as promotion is concerned, Joey would love to float bond issues and develop realty propositions. But up to the present time, he's never been quite able to make the grade. So he's quite content to bring two men together in a speakeasy deal, or to introduce new customers to a racing handbook, or to engage in any one of a thousand rackets you'll find along the big street. And regardless of the type of transaction, Joey always referred to it as a promotion.

If Joey said he received $25, you could be fairly certain it was $5—and perhaps a little less. Like all promoters, he exaggerated everything. Yet, whether it was $5 or $25, it would be his treat just the same. The boys would drink up until the money was gone.

Every once in so often Joey found it absolutely necessary to promote a job. That was one type of promotion of which he wasn't particularly fond—but when he couldn't help himself, there he was. It goes without saying that he never took a very hard job, and the work never lasted more than a week when Joey would get the air.

But would he be downhearted? Not our Joey.

"Just lost my job," he will exclaim airily, "but that only goes to prove that people never understand real talent. I'll promote a real deal one of these days, and all the wise guys will be saying they always knew I had it in me.

A few weeks ago, Joey hit the corner of 47th St. and Broadway in a most enthusiastic mood.

"Boys," he cried excitedly, "I finally did it. Mitt me, kids, because little Joey finally stumbled on a proposition that's gonna make him plenty of sugar. What do you think has happened? You'll die when I spill it. I'm in the moving picture business!"

The six or seven men all looked a trifle skeptical.

"It's pretty evident," he grinned, "that you guys don't believe me. But grab an earful of what's happened, and see if it doesn't listen like the absolute mccoy.

"I'm walking alond 42nd St. the other afternoon and I run across a Polish picture that's running there. The manager's standing outside the house and, since he looks fat and healthy, I stop and have a little chat with him. He complains that he isn't making any dough with the Polish picture.

"I could have told him there ain't enough Polish people on 42nd St. to put the thing across, but that would be tipping my mit. So I just asked him if it was good picture and, when he swore it was swell, I had heard enough.

"So the next thing I did was to hop over to the film exchange and dig up the guy who had charge of the film. I talked to him for 20 minutes, and before I had gone 15 he had already agreed to let me have the picture for a week. He wanted some money, but I laughed him out of the idea. I swore that I'd pay him off after I had exhibited the film in the right spot.

"There I was, then, with a Polish picture on my hands. You think little Joey doesn't know his onions? I got the name of a town in Pennsylvania that has nine-tenths of its population talking Polish. Then I got the name of the owner of a big hall down there. I phoned him with the charges reversed, told him how big the proposition was, and agreed to split the profits if he'd run the picture.

"'I'll do as you say,' he told me, 'but you've got to be here to help me run things when the picture is shown.

"'I'll be there,' I assured him.

"And so, boys, that's the way things stand right now. The film went out this afternoon and I'm due to hop a rattler myself tomorrow. Of course, I'm supposed to split my end with the guy in the film exchange. But by the time I deduct my expenses and this and that, he'll find out that he owes me dough. Altogether, I wouldn't be surprised if I clear myself three or four grand."

"Well, fellers," he went on, "what do you think of your little Joey now? Never thought he'd make the grade, did you? You're first beginning to see what a real promoter can do. It takes real class to promote a picture, a hall and a big showing—all for nothing.

"We always said so," agreed the others.....

Exactly two days later, the most heartbroken man on all Broadway was Joey, the promoter. What do you suppose had happened? The poor mug wasn't going to make a quarter. Because, after promoting the affair to a climax, he wasn't able to promote the railroad fare to the town in Pennsylvania!.....

PINCHOT'S MESSAGE ASKS AID FOR 1,150,000 JOBLESS

GOVERNOR SEES NEED FOR NEW REVENUES

Crisis Cannot Be Met by Economy Alone, He Asserts; Free Hand for Assembly

HARRISBURG, June 28.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot in his message to the special session of the Legislature last night called for direct relief for the 1,150,000 persons he estimates are out of work in the state. He said a minimum of $40,000,000 will be required to take care of them during the next eight months.

Although describing himself as a "hearty believer" in work relief, he asserted it would cost the state "at least $200,000,000" annually to provide work relief, while "direct relief of a sort" can be supplied for $60,000,000 a year.

The chief executive left the method of raising the money to the legislators, but pointed out that only two courses are available: New taxation and loans by municipalities against delinquent taxes. The gubernatorial call, he said, gives the General Assembly "the broadest possible latitude for dealing with the question whether, and if so how, the state itself shall provide for unemployment relief." He advocated greatest possible speed in enacting essential legislation, both for relief for the jobless and for balancing the budget.

Relief appropriations under the Talbot $10,000,000 act of the 1931 special session, coupled with dwindling state revenues, he said, will require $15,000,000 to square the biennial fiscal account. This objective, he contended, cannot be met solely by economy in government. Aside from economy measures, he asserted the funds to balance the budget can be obtained only by reducing appropriations previously made or finding new sources of revenue.

He said the administration, state Republican organization and Philadelphia Republican organization have agreed to support bills covering the first 12 of the 14 points outlined in his call convening the special session.

Warns of Dangers

"The people of Pennsylvania expect you to disregard all other matters but the relief of the suffering and the protection of the Commonwealth. The state administration is more than ready to meet you halfway."

Warning the Legislative of the danger of delay in providing relief for the 1,150,000 unemployed, he said:

"It would be mere foolishness to believe that bitter distress can continue without producing its natural result."

He asserted the number of persons out of work in the state is steadily increasing and estimated that an additional million persons are suffering from part-time employment.

Referring to the last special session when he asked for $120,000,000 for relief for two years, he said time had proved his estimates correct and that "relief at the rate of $60,000,000 a year" is "the very least that will meet the imperative demand." As the Legislature must provide funds only until March 1, two months after the regluar session convenes next year, two-thirds of the $60,000,000 or $40,000,000 is the required money for relief for the eight months from July 1 to next March.

Economy Stressed

In presenting the 14-point program he devoted the greater portion of his message to economy in government, balancing of the state budget for the remainder of the fiscal year ending next May 31, and restoration of the abatement of appropriations resulting from enactment of the Talbot $10,000,000 relief act.

The agreement between the administration and political leaders covers the following points:

Balancing of the state budget and restoration of the abated appropriations of state-aided hospitals, educational institutions, welfare institutions and mothers' assistance funds resulting from the Talbot act.

Levying of new taxes or authorization for local loans or both to provide funds for relief.

Increasing the power of political subdivisions to collect delinquent taxes and permitting local taxes and water rents to be paid in monthly installments.

Authorization for a state loan in an amount to be determined by the Legislature to reimburse municipalities for money expended by them for direct relief.

Permitting the state to participate in Federal loans to states when and if the Legislature authorizes the governor to do so.

Authorization for a $25,000,000 bond issue to finance the state government in the next biennium if it is found necessary.

Permitting Philadelphia City to designate the number and salaries of Philadelphia County employes.

Levying of a franchise tax on foreign corporations to make their taxation more on a parity with that of domestic corporations which pay a capital stock tax.

Eliminating the exemptions of natural and artificial gas companies, water companies and steam heat companies from the eight mills gross receipts tax levied on other utilities.

Reduction of state building appropriations.

Authorizing creation of limited dividend housing corporations to provide better homes at lower rentals for workers.

Permitting the Secretary of Banking to make loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on the assets of closed banks and building and loan associations to pay their depositors.

A constitutional amendment to permit the state to distribute all or part of the money collected by it to political subdivisions.

Two points included in the call on which there is no agreement are a graduated income tax to relieve real estate owners of part of their local school tax burden and a $50,000,000 road bond issue for work relief.

Cites Deficit Threat

Discussing economy in government, the Governor warned against any confusion about the finances of the commonwealth, saying the facts and figures are clear and that this should not form an obstacles to success of the present session. He asserted the Supreme Court decision upholding the Talbot act required the abatement of the appropriations to hospitals, homes, educational institutions and mothers' assistance funds to provide the money to meet the $10,000,000 Talbot act appropriations.

He added that the anticipated revenues on which the present budget was prepared were $5,000,000 in excess of revenues and that the state's budget must be balanced to avert a deficit at the end of the biennium next May 31.

To meet this decline, the governor said he had directed a reduction of $5,350,000 in the appropriations to departments under his jurisdiction. The question of whether the anticipated deficit is greater than $5,000,000 depends on whether the state receive the money from the sale of the Philadelphia-Camden Bridge bonds, he continued, stating that if this money does not come in the deficit may be almost $15,000,000. The state expected $8,500,000 from this source and if the money does not come before May 31, the deficit will be greater. He said tax receipts generally are falling off, making uncertain at this time the amount of money with which the state will have to finance its government operation for the 1933-1935 biennium.

Appropriation Cuts

Governor's office, $25,000; Department of Agriculture, $146,483; Department of Banking, $12,893; Department of Forests and Waters, $243,105; Department of Health, $34,592; Insurance Department, $74,858; Department of Internal Affairs, $92,764; Department of Labor and Industry, $71,689; Department of Military Affairs, $468,129; Department of Property and Supplies, $804,082; Department of Mines, $42,019; Department of Public Instruction, $1,284,416; Public Service Commission, $14,800; State Department, $43,306; Pennsylvania State Police, $20,001; Welfare Department, $1,972,149, and miscellaneous, $146.

He explained he could not reduce the appropriations for the expenses of the judiciary and the Legislature, the Lieutenant Governor, the Auditor General's Department and the State Treasurer's Department.

The Governor suggested that of the $9,720,364 abatements of state aided institutions to finance the Talbot act payments the Legislature should provide for restoration of appropriations amounting to $6,407,232.

Restoration of Pitt Funds And Mothers' Aid Asked

HARRISBURG, June 28.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot in his message to the Legislature recommended that $6,407,232 in abated appropriations be restored to hospitals, homes, mothers' assistance funds, welfare and educational institutions.

Appropriations of such institutions and those for other than ordinary expenses of the state government were reduced to the amount of $9,720,364 as the result of the Supreme Court decision validating the Talbot $10,000,000 unemployment relief act passed by the 1931 special session.

ductions and other extensive cuts in state expenditures.

The resolutions which claimed the complete attention of the House while the Senate met in brief session, require:

Detailed summaries from the State Treasurer, Auditor General and Secretary of Revenue of State Receipts and Expenditure during the fiscal year ended May 31, 1931, and the best available estimates for the current fiscal year.

Itemized accounts of appropriations, expenses and personnel of all state-aided and stated-owned institutions.

Lists of expenditures for light, here and throughout the state.

Analysis of the costs of collecting and administering the entire motor license fund.

Itemized reports of the disbursement of an appropriation of more than $4,000,000 to the Department of Property and Supplies.

TIME LIMIT ON DATA

All data demanded under the separate resolutions is to be made available by next Tuesday. Under a blanket supplementary resolution, the Appropriations Committee was empowered to dig out for itself any additional information it regards as essential to ocmpleting the financial picture. The latter, in effect, gives the committee full authority to examine all financial records and departmental accounts to obtain any data it seeks.

The sub-committee which will direct the inquiry comprises Representatives McKay, of Mercer; Stadtlander, of Allegheny; Blumberg, of Philadelphia; Talbot, of Delaware, and Brown, of Susquehanna.

The principal objective of the inquiry is to break down the departmental expenditures to such an extent that the bare essentials will be separated from items which the economy-seking legislators regard as unnecessary.

With the basic data expected from the investigation, the economy leaders plan to wage a campaign for wholesale reductions in state expenses to provide funds for state unemployment relief.

The House, like the Senate, recessed until late today without debate on the floor, but at a meeting of the Wade-Sheffer rural group the demand for economies was emphatic.

DEMAND PAY CUTS

Representative Bart Richards (Rep.), of Lawrence, who with Representative Chester Rhodes (Dem.), of Monroe, led the move for widespread salary reductions declared the depression has curtailed the income of everybody but state employes. He said:

"State employes are not exempt from this economic law. Some millions of dollars can be cut from the current biennial budget through this and other reductions in governmental cost."

WARNS OF FAILURE

Richards called upon the rural members to "watch carefully" to avoid a recurrence of the situation which developed from the 1931 special session.

Representative Richards declared close scrutiny of all legislation and good judgment in enacting measures is essential if the present special session, together with the 1933 regular session, is to provide an adequate solution to the state's unemployment and budget problems. He predicted another special session in 1934 would result unless the legislators displayed caution and foresight.

Representative George Wade, Cumberland, also warned against the possibilities of the rural members having to go "back from this session as we returned from the special session last year." He said it was quite possible that, unless every precaution was taken by the legislators, all that would result from this session would be "a few technicalities in the way of legislation which would benefit Philadelphia.

TAX ON POWER URGED IN STATE

A tax of one-half mill per kilowatt hour on electrical energy at the point of origin is proposed by William A. Walker, of Avalon, Assemblyman-elect from the Thirteenth Legislative District.

In an address before the West View Board of Trade last night Walker revealed he had drafted such a bill for presentation, probably Thursday. This tax, he said, would raise more than $500,000 yearly, or enough to balance the budget and give hospitals and other state aided institutions their original appropriations.

BILLS TO HELP CLOSED BANKS

HARRISBURG, June 28.—(AP.)—The Senate Banks and Building and Loan Associations' Committee will meet late today to report for passage two conference bills designed to release frozen assets of closed banking institutions and permitting them to borrow from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Both bills are sponsored by Senator Freeman, of Lebanon.

One would amend the Act of 1923 to permit the Secretary of Banking to lease real estate held by closed banks for three years without court sanction, or for 10 years with court approval. It would also give the banking secretary the power to borrow from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on the assets of closed banks to pay depositors.

He could, without court permission sell real estate or personal property at private sale and also sell unlisted securities.

The other measure would amend the Act of 1891 by permitting building and loan associations to pledge mortgages and real estate owned by them to secure loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or any other agency of the federal government except national banks.

RELIEF PLANS DEFENDED BY PINCHOT

Governor Tells Meeting of Labor Group Program of Session Is 'Only Way'

HARRISBURG, June 28.—(AP.)—Gov. Gifford Pinchot today told the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, in a special emergency convention, that the legislative program agreed to by state political and legislative leaders is "the only way to get additional money without additional taxation" for unemployment relief.

And, he added, new taxation "seems to me politically impossible and economically inexpedient."

REVIEWS SITUATION

He reviewed the state's legislative and financial situation as it stands at the beginning of the present extra legislative session. In this connection he noted that, of the $192,000,000 appropriated for various purposes to cover the present biennium, he could not touch $124,000,000. And of the remaining $68,000,000, which he could cut, half has been spent. Of the remaining $34,000,000, he said, he expected to save $5,000,000 through governmental economies.

Further economy, he said, is impossible without crippling the state government.

DENIES BENEFIT

John A. Phillips, president of the federation, opened the convention with the declaration that "not a single cent is guaranteed for direct immediate relief of the starving unemployed in the proposed program, in the agreement between the Governor and the Republican leaders." He said:

"The forces of organized labor in this commonwealth in conjunction with welfare and civic groups are assembled to frame a program to supplement the official proposals, which will actually produce cash quickly, to prevent starvation while improvements are being made in our Constitution and other long-term reforms are debated."

Recapture Woman Fleeing Hospital

A woman who left St. John's Hospital last night before police arrived to take her to North Side headquarters was taken into custody a short time later in her home on the South Side. She is Stella Wandas, 30, of 1713 Larkins way.

The woman, police say, was beaten last week by Anthony Joyce, of the North Side, who is at liberty under bail. She was sent to the hospital and was to appear in police court against Joyce.

AS GASOLINE GETS OLDER
GASOLINE GETS WEAKER

STALE GAS IS FEEBLE—fresh GAS PACKS POWER

LEAVE an uncorked bottle of gasoline around your house and what happens? It evaporates—the light ends—the "easy starting" elements—go slowly off into thin air.

But more than evaporation takes place as gas gets stale. A chemical change occurs. That's why the older gas gets, the weaker it gets. That's why gas can get so stale—so "powerless"—it won't even kick over a motor!

And as gas gets staler, it gets stickier, too—is more apt to clog valves. And it decreases in anti-knock value—is more apt to knock and thump.

The whole petroleum industry has long known these facts. Gulf has worked on the problem—and has now perfected a system that assures the motorist of getting FRESH gasoline. Here's how...

Gulf makes the best gas that can be produced—and so refines that gas as to take out the very elements which cause rapid deterioration. Hence, Gulf gas stays FRESH longer.

Next, Gulf has organized its distribution system to rush that FRESH-MADE gas to you in a hurry.

It handles gas as though it were perishable food. The huge Gulf refineries have been carefully placed in many sections of the country, so that it is easily possible to rush FRESH gasoline to every one of the 45,000 Gulf filling stations. A vast fleet of tank trucks speeds FRESH gas to Gulf stations every day in the year.

When you buy gas you're really buying power. Stale gas can't give you all the power you pay for. Get FRESH gasoline. FRESH-MADE—delivered FRESH. Get Gulf. Use nothing else. Your motor will have more power. It will be cleaner and quieter.

CONVENTION ON AIR

Women Democratic Leaders In New Morning Series Opened on WCAE

Two prominent women who are playing leading roles in the Democrat national convention give their views of the conclave when they speak over a coast-to-coast NBC network, including WCAE, tomorrow and Thursday mornings.

Mrs. Norton

Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, is scheduled to go on the air from Chicago tomorrow morning at 9:15, followed by Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson on Thursday over the same facilities at the same time. Both women leaders will be introduced by Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, prominent figure in social and political circles in Chicago.

During the same period on subsequent days, Representative Ruth Bryan Owen, of Florida, and Elisabeth Marbury, New York Democratic committeewoman, are scheduled to come before the microphone. The series of broadcasts was inaugurated by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman this morning.

"The Craddock Case," the true story of an internationally famous jewel robbery that resulted in the capture of one of the world's most notorious criminals after a lengthy chase that brought the police forces of two continents into play, is dramatized during the cigaret dance hour on WCAE tonight at 10. The musical portion of the program, with Walter O'Keefe, piloting the magic carpet, is presented by Ted Fiorito and his orchestra, playing from San Francisco.

Program Pointers

Ronald G. Portman, bass baritone and member of the New York Opera Comique for the last two years, makes his initial appearance from KDKA tonight at 8:30. Included on his program are the classic "Sapphische Ode" by Brahms, and two compositions by Frank La Forge, "Schlupwinkel" and "Before the crucifix . . . On the same station at 7:15, Helen Bell Rush, prominent Pittsburgh concert and church singer, and Milton Lomask, concert master of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, join with Paul Whiteman's Band, started singing on a dare . . . She was selected for a singing part in the Annual Campus Circus at Northwestern University where she was studying dramatic art last year . . . And went through the part because of a challenge after she protested "But I don't sing."

Mr. Portman

Countess Albani

Countess Olga Albani, raven-haired Spanish soparno, is replacing Jessica Dragonette during those Friday night concerts on WCAE during the summer . . . The Mills Brothers have a new guitar — which will never be heard on the air . . . It cost $225, and was bought as a concession to the boys' stage audiences because it looks "grand" behind the footlights . . . but they'll stick to their $6.25 mail order special in the studio, because they feel more at home with it.

With the assistance of Abou Ben Krueger and his laughing saxophone, Georgie Price does an Oriental parody of the "Sheik of Araby" song on WJAS at 7:45.

Floyd Donbar, KQV engineer, does triple duty today. On duty at the transmitter in the morning, he goes on the air at 7:30 with his All-Wave Club talk and makes another appearance at 9 as tenor soloist with the Sunshine Minstrels.

Uncle Bob and Betty On Air at 5:45

In order to permit WCAE listeners to tune in on the Democratic convention highlights tonight at 6, Uncle Bob and Betty go on the air 15 minutes earlier than their usual time—at 5:45—to read the Sun-Telegraph comic page.

The theater and its personalities are discussed on WCAE tonight at 7 when George Seibel, dramatic and literary critic of the Sun-Telegraph, gives his weekly "Plays and Players" talk.

Broadcasting the latest news four times daily from the Sun-Telegraph editorial rooms, Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, goes on the air at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m., 2:30 p. m. and 6:30 p. m.

Bargain hints for shoppers are relayed to WCAE fans during the "Peggy's Tips" broadcast tomorrow morning at 9.

Phillips H. Lord speaks each line of his Country Doctor programs aloud as he writes them.

Harry Reser is the man who taught the Prince of Wales to play the banjo . . . Marion Carley, Columbia staff pianist, has broadcast in both England and Holland . . . She says her most amusing experience was in having her numbers announced in Dutch and being unable to tell whether or not she was playing the right composition.

Morton Downey sails for a vacation abroad soon, with Ireland the first stop . . . Singin' Sam will vacation at his old home in Richmond, Ind.

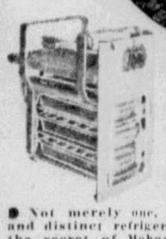
THE NEW MOHAWK

the Refrigerator with the DUOZONE UNIT



Provides 2 Separate Refrigerating Coils
ONE for COOLING FOOD STORAGE
ONE for SUPER-SPEED FREEZING

Not merely one, but two separate and distinct refrigerating coils—that's the secret of Mohawk's unusual efficiency.

The Cooling Coil is used exclusively for cooling food storage. Because of its moderate temperature it does not collect frost and ice—therefore operates unfailingly at full efficiency. The Freezing Coil is built under and over the ice trays. Its intense cold is, therefore, concentrated directly on the trays, giving super-speed freezing. But because its cold does not circulate through the food storage compartment, it does not subject stored foods to destructive chilling.

The great advantage of Duozone, beauty, roominess, electric lighting, mechanical simplicity and long life—and every other feature important to refrigerator satisfaction in the home . . . these are yours in the Mohawk at an extremely moderate price.

COOKING STOVE UP TO DATE

A development of electric range control that, according to its sponsors, will revolutionize cooking was announced at a meeting yesterday at the Iron City Electric Company. P. Y. Danley and J. E. Hugo explained the new cooking methods.

The development, put on the range by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, makes possible electric control processes of cooking, pointers governing the searing or browning temperature, as well as making possible a maintenance—or level—heat. The different methods, called the fully automatic flavor zone method, and the maintained temperature method, are made possible by the improvements. A combination of the two methods is also possible.

Would Pinchot Bolt To Aid Roosevelt?

By MARK SHIELDS

Mr. Shields

CHICAGO, June 28.—Pennsylvanians in Chicago for the Democratic National Convention are speculating on the course Gov. Gifford Pinchot will follow should Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, be the Presidential nominee of this gathering.

Roosevelt is a Democrat. Mr. Pinchot is a Republican, but not one who has been irked by orthodoxy and that he is any Republican at all is denied by the organization of Pennsylvania, especially that part of it dominating Philadelphia.

For some time there has been a kinship between the New York and Pennsylvania governors. They have many ideas in common along the line of publice service, especially as government regulation touches power development and control.

On the other hand, there is no sympathy whatever between Mr. Pinchot and President Hoover. Nothing would please the Governor more than to see the President retired to private life.

Can Mr. Pinchot afford to bolt? Well, the argument here goes, what has he to lose?

It is figured that Mr. Pinchot has no political future in Pennsylvania. He might be a candidate for the Senate against David A. Reed, but Mr. Pinchot is an arid dry, and the results of the last primary between Senator James J. Davis and Gen. Smedley D. Butler showed that the dry side was not the path to victory.

Butler Assessment Costly to Pinchot

Furthermore, Mr. Pinchot has antagonized many independents who have followed him in the past, and the assessment put on the state payroll to finance the Butler campaign lost him one of his greatest fighting principles. Mr. Pinchot probably was not responsible for this irregular step. It was done in his name by some of his associates who viewed this as "practical politics."

So it would not seem that the future is bright for Mr. Pinchot attaining elective office again in the Keystone state.

What has he to gain by bolting the Republican nominee and coming out for Roosevelt?

Might it not be that his services would be recognized by a cabinet position when he leaves the governorship?

Might he not become, for example, Secretary of the Interior, returning to the Washington official life which is pleasing both to himself and Mrs. Pinchot?

There would be an elementary and sardonic justice in this appointment which would be pleasing to Mr. Pinchot.

Roosevelt-Taft Feud Role Recalled

It will be recalled that back in 1911 Mr. Pinchot was Chief Forester in the Interior Department when Ballinger was Secretary of the Interior. Pinchot was a Roosevelt man, a follower of Theodore the Bull Moose. Ballinger was an appointee of Taft. In the split between Roosevelt and Taft, Pinchot supported the former, and political history ascribes to him much of the foundation of the antagonism which grew up between the two national figures who once had been firm friends.

Mr. Pinchot might like to go back to Washington as head of the department from which he had been forcibly ejected in a controversy which became a national topic. He would be dealing with the development of the country's national resources, a subject which always has been close to his heart.

Now comes the question of what value Mr. Pinchot would add to the Roosevelt movement in Pennsylvania.

Practically none.

The Democratic platform probably will be better than the Republican straddle, and most of Mr. Pinchot's Pennsylvania friends are in the dry army.

But out in the Northwest, in North and South Dakota, in Wisconsin, even in Nebraska, Mr. Pinchot has a doctrine which finds acceptance. Should he go on the stump on those sections he would be an invaluable aid to Mr. Roosevelt.

There would be nothing revolutionary in Mr. Pinchot bolting Hoover at this time. He was privately more friendly to Al Smith in 1928 than to Hoover. One of his outstanding progressive associates, Senator George Norris, of Nebraska, bolted Hoover in that campaign.

Perhaps none of these conjectures may transpire. But their possibility is being discussed here and with solemnity.

Barbecue Bombing Being Investigated

County detectives today were investigating the bombing of the Blue Moon Inn, Library road, after the proprietor's daughter, Helen Voccola, 18, told them that several men recently attempted to persuade her to drop charges against Henry Jacobs, whom she accused of attacking her last September.

Jacobs was convicted of the attack by a jury June 8, but petitioned the court for a new trial yesterday morning, according to police.

Davis to Speak At Moose Fete

Senator James J. Davis, enroute from Mooseheart, Ill., to Washington, will stop off in Pittsburgh to be the principal speaker tonight at the celebration of the twenty-fourth anniversary of the organization of the Loyal Order of Moose in Moose Temple, Penn avenue. The program will include other addresses and vaudeville entertainment.

SUIT TO TIE UP CITY'S FUNDS THREATENED

Leader of Helping Hand Declares 'Overhead' Takes Too Much Welfare Cash

Threat of a taxpayer's suit to halt the expenditure of the $3,000,000 city relief bond money under the present system of aid has been made by Attorney Harry I. Miller, who declares methods now being used by the welfare organizations are "wasteful."

The ordinance providing for the sale of $800,000 relief bonds is before Finance Committee of Council today. Action on a request by Miller of a hearing is also expected.

Miller has been a leader in the work of the Helping Hand Association and the Surplus for the Needy cannery.

He favors the purchase of food in bulk and direct distribution to needy families. He would also cut down the payrolls of salaried welfare workers, and use trained social workers only as leaders for numerous volunteers.

Miller predicted in his letter to Council that if relief funds are not conserved, a situation will arise which will prove disastrous next winter.

More than 25 per cent of the money going to welfare organizations for relief is being expended for salaries, Miller declared. He said:

"If the organizations expending this money are permitted to proceed as formerly, we will need another bond issue and more money very shortly. It seems as though all the money heretofore has gone into a rat hole."

BRIDGE SUICIDE DIVORCEE

Police and relatives today were trying to learn why Leota G. Johnson, 26, of 82 Seminole street, Washington, Pa., leaped to her death from the Liberty Bridge into the Monongahela River Sunday. A Washington physician said he talked to her Saturday and she had told him she was not feeling well.

The body, viewed by hundreds of persons Sunday afternoon and yesterday, was identified late yesterday afternoon by a sister, Miss Thelma Johnson.

Miss Johnson was a waitress in the George Washington Hotel in Washington, the sister told morgue attaches.

Relatives told police Miss Johnson was divorced a year ago, and had been brooding over the seperation. She leaves a daughter about five years old. Her parents live in Barnesville, O.

TRIPLETS, 2, PARTED BY DEATH

JOSEPH, PATRICK AND GEORGE . . . . . POLICE TRIED FUTILELY TO SAVE GEORGE'S LIFE

The fair-haired, sunny-faced triplet sons of Mrs. Margaret Halleran, 5271 Dyke street, Hazelwood, among whom stalked Death. One, two, then three contracted whooping cough, two recovered, but George developed pneumonia that in the gray hours today took his life despite the efforts of Hazelwood police to save him with oxygen treatments with station-house inhalator.

TRIPLETS PART IN DEATH

There were three little beds, but now one of them is vacant. Little George Halleran, one of triplets, died early this morning, a pneumonia victim. George, Joe and Patrick, 2 years old, are the sons of Mrs. Margaret Halleran, 5271 Dyke street, Hazelwood.

Three weeks ago they contracted whooping cough. Joe and Patrick recovered, but George developed pneumonia and had been in a critical condition under care of welfare physicians since Friday. Last night wagonmen from Hazelwood Police Station administered oxygen to him for several hours. Toward midnight the baby became worse. The police radio was used in an attempt to locate the physician. But it was too late; George was dead.

Mrs. Halleran has been separated from her husband since the triplets were born. She also has a daughter, Mary Catherine, 4.

SEEK TO CHANGE NAME FOR FETE

Changing the name of the proposed "All-Nations Festival" in Schenley Park, July 4, to "Independence Day Celebration" is urged in a resolution adopted yesterday by the board of management, Pittsburgh Chapter, Sons of American Revolution.

Citing that the ceremonies will open with a salute to the flag by the American Legion and are intended to inculcate a spirit of genuine Americanism, the resolution authorizes Col. Franklin Blackstone, president, to name a special committee to represent the chapter. Most of the members will be in Uniontown for the Fort Necessity celebration, Col. Blackstone said.

John G. Toth, radio broadcaster in behalf of good citizenship, who protested the All-Nations Festival plan, as ill-becoming the celebration of Independence Day, was present.

Council Considers Playground Offer

An offer from Sears, Roebuck & Co. to permit the city to use part of the company's parking lot at Highland avenue and Rural street, East End, for playground purposes, was being considered by Council today.

Harry Abbott, manager of the company's Pittsburgh store, said he had been requested by the Larimer Playground Association to permit use of the site.

Auto Crashes House, Driver Makes Escape

Penn avenue police are searching for a motorist who early today sped away after his automobile had leaped the curb and crashed into the front door of the home of Harry Bitner, at 2135 Liberty avenue. The machine broke the front steps and damaged the doorway.

RIVER BATHER KILLED BY BOAT

Struck by propeller blades when he was drawn into the wash of a motor launch, behind which he was swimming with a companion in the Allegheny River at Oakmont last night, James Murphy, 20, of 5215 Duncan street, Lawrenceville, was killed instantly, according to a deputy coroner's report.

Murphy and Charles Fleischer, 20, of 5144 Keystone street, Lawrenceville, were swimming when the launch, Miss Pittsburgh, came up the river. They swam out to ride the waves and Murphy was pulled into the propeller wash, according to the report.

He was pulled into the launch by the crew, George Shimpano and Ralph Hite. Dr. C. S. Ackel, of Oakmont, pronounced the swimmer dead.

John Russ, 8, of Dixon street, Sewickley, was drowned when he was seized with cramps while swimming with three companions in the Ohio River at the foot of Chestnut street, Sewickley, last night, according to a coroner's report.

The body was recovered a short time later and police worked for a half hour in a futile effort to revive the boy.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

CHICAGO, June 28.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

No convention yesterday, the Democrats met, talked, agreed, and adjourned. So the day was a total loss, the convention officially opens today.

Will Rogers

It wasn't even a rehearsal yesterday. Nobody fought, nobody even split the party.

Well, if you ever saw a disgusted bunch of people leaving a hall, it was all of us yesterday.

People had traveled hundreds of miles, joined delegations, some come as spectators and paid fancy prices to see what? To see eleven hundred delegates sit there and act like a lot of Republicans. Why, there wasn't an argument in a carload.

Cheered everything, hissed nothing. It made me almost ashamed I was a Democrat. Yours, WILL.

Defends Prohibition 'in Principle,' Sees Error In Sudden Application

BRIAR CLIFF MANOR, N. Y., June 28. — (AP.) — James R. Mellon, 87-year-old Pittsburgh banker, and brother of the American ambassador to Great Britain, defended the Eighteenth Amendment in principle, but favored modification of the present liquor laws in a speech delivered at Briar Cliff lodge last night before the Theta Delta Chi fraternity.

Referring to the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment, he said:

"The mistake was in making it too arbitrary at the start. The country should not have been deprived of liquor with such a jolt.

"I favor submission of the prohibition question to the people of the United States. They ought to have a chance to deliberate upon it. The people now are handicapped, however, because these are peculiar times. The whole world is upside down and everyone does as he pleases."

He criticized the stand of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., on the question. He said:

"Mr. Rockefeller is entitled to his opinion that prohibition is a failure, but in coming out so prominently with such a view he has influenced a great many people against a movement which had its worthwhile points."

WILLYS SCORES DRY STRADDLE

CHICAGO, June 28.—(INS.)—John N. Willys, former United States ambassador to Poland and chairman of the board of the Willys-Overland Company, was today on record with the opinion that drinking has increased among workingmen under the prohibition system.

Declaring that his conclusions are based on 12 years of close observation, Willys, in an address before a gathering of automobile dealers, said:

"Prohibition has had ample time to prove its value and I am convinced that it is a failure. My men drink more now than they did before the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted."

Willys criticized the Republican prohibition plank, terming it a "straddle plank." He said:

"I am a Republican. But, as a businessman, I would like to see the $1,000,000,000 a year income now going to crime diverted to the federal government by repeal."

Seek to Padlock 'Showboat' Cabaret

Judge Nelson McVicar today granted a preliminary injunction against the Showboat, occupying a basement at 59 Fullerton street. Prohibition agents testified they raided the place May 2 and June 14, getting quantities of whisky and gin.

FIGHT OVER RUM FATAL TO GIRL

A fight over an ounce of whisky today was blamed for the fatal injuries to Miss Mary White, 28, of Bulger, Pa., who was found dead in McKeesport yesterday morning.

Pittsburgh homicide detectives were holding Mrs. Marie Pryor, 23, of New Kensington; Edward Geltz, 42, 702 Locust street, McKeesport, and Andrew E. Roll, 35, 2446 East street, North Side, for hearings tomorrow.

Denied the remaining ounce of whisky in the bottle, Miss White attacked Mrs. Pryor and Geltz as they were riding in Carson street, between the Wabash Railroad Bridge and the Point Bridge, according to Homicide Lieut. Frank Ferris. Mrs. Pryor told detectives that the three were en route to the dead girl's home at Bulger.

Police said Miss Pryor told them that after Geltz threw the bottle from the truck, Miss White attacked her. Geltz stopped the truck and the trio alighted and when Miss White turned on Geltz, he threw her to the street, placing his knee on her chest.

A post mortem held at McKeesport revealed she had suffered a crushed chest and broken ribs.

PLANNED DEATH OF KIN, POLICE ASSERT

Attack at Picnic on One Intended Victim Leads to Arrests; Papers Discovered

Two women were under arrest today for a blackjack attack on a third woman—an attack inspired by the victim's life insurance policy, Police Chief John J. Crawford, of Mifflin Township, reported.

Crawford said one of the suspects admitted the plot further involved the death of another woman and a man, who were insured.

The intended victims were the husband of one of the women, her sister-in-law and the sister-in-law's husband, Crawford declares.

FORTUNE TELLER LINKED

The prisoners, charged with felonious assault and battery, were Mrs. Mary Chalfo, 31, of Whitaker way, Munhall, and Mrs. Gezella Young, 35, of Greensprings avenue, Homeville, described by Crawford as a fortune teller.

Crawford said the two were arrested after they had beaten Mrs. Chalfo's sister-in-law, Mrs. Stella Chalfo, 22, at a picnic at Breiley Farm, Mifflin Township, yesterday. The women used a blackjack, he said.

Stella Chalfo was in Homestead Hospital today recovering from the beating.

PLOT ADMITTED

Crawford said Mrs. Young had admitted that she was to receive $5,000 for aid in killing Mrs. Chalfo's husband, John, on whom there was a policy worth $20,000 for accidental death.

For the life of Stella Chalfo, Mrs. Young was to get half of the $500 policy, Crawford quoted her. A similar policy was held on Stella's husband, Joseph.

The Rev. and Mrs. Kinley McMillan, of Pittsburgh, were recovering from injuries suffered yesterday when their automobile skidded on a roadway near New Castle and hit a pole. They are in the Jamison Hospital, New Castle. The Rev. Mr. McMillan was formerly pastor of the Herron Avenue Presbyterian Church. Two girls, daughters of the Rev. C. C. Cribbs, of Ingram, were slightly bruised.

RUMOR OF COAL MERGER HERE REVIVED

Inspection of Properties by Engineers Again Brings Up Talk of Combine

Rumors have been revived that a bituminous gas coal combination is in the making with the Pittsburgh Coal Company as the nucleus, although that company denies any knowledge of the proposed amalgamation.

However, it was reliably learned some overtures which had been made looking toward a combination of a few of the larger companies had fallen and, at the moment, the likelihood of any particular group being hooked up with the Pittsburgh concern is quite remote.

The presence of engineers at the properties of one or two mentioned as likely to be included in such merger, it is believed, resulted in the latest rumors being circulated.

It was stated at the office of the Pittsburgh Coal Company that it is not unusual for engineers to inspect coal properties, for it frequently happens that an exchange of coal lands is made, where such change would be advantageous in the operations of the companies involved. It was denied, however, that any combination is being considered.

MOTOR BOATS ON TAX LIST

The new revenue act imposes taxes ranging from $10 to $200 on the users of yachts, pleasure boats, sailing boats, and motor boats with fixed or overboard engines, over 28 feet in length, when not used exclusively for trade, commercial fishing and national defense. The tax become effective July 1.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue, through Collector D. B. Heiner of the Pittsburgh district, issued a circular denoting a tax of $10 on boats over 28 feet in length; $40 on boats 50 feet to 100 feet; $100 on boats 100 feet to 150 feet; $150 on boats 150 feet to 200 feet, and $200 on boats over 200 feet.

In the case of a foreign built boat which was not owned on January 1, 1926, by a citizen of the United States, or by a domestic partnership or corporation, the tax is twice the amount stated above. Boats used without profit by benevolent, charitable, or religius organizations exclusively for furnishing aid, comfort or relief to seamen, are exempt from tax.

Another circular issued by the Bureau of Internal Revenue sets forth that any person liable to taxes on lubricating oil, brewer's wort and malt products, matches, soft drinks and gasoline, who wilfully fails to keep proper and accurate records, is subject to a fine of $10,000, or imprisonment, or both, with the costs of prosecution, and is also liable to a penalty equal to the tax not paid.

Do you inhale?

"Like a stepchild"

..a question generally avoided. Why?

Do you inhale? Why has this question been treated "like a stepchild" in cigarette advertising?

It's a subject vital to you—for you do inhale—we all do—every smoker inhales—every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette.

Do you inhale? A simple question. But silence on the subject—may be full of meaning.

Lucky Strike has dared to raise this question ...because certain impurities concealed in even the finest, mildest tobacco leaves are removed by Lucky Strike's famous purifying process. Luckies created that process. Only Luckies have it!

Do you inhale? Of course you do! Then this vital message is for you!

ANNOUNCEMENT REVEALED IN HUTTON CASE

Nurse's Engagement Claim Was Upheld by Singer, Grocer's Boy Testifies

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—(AP.)—An announcement in a grocery store to the grocer, butcher and grocery boy of the prospective marriage of Myrtle St. Pierre and David Hutton was described by the boy yesterday in the trial of Miss St. Pierre's $200,000 breach of promise suit.

The witness, Sidney Solomon, said Miss St. Pierre entered the store with Hutton one day and made some purchases. The boy said:

"Then she told us Mr. Hutton was her future hubby. Mr. Hutton put his arm around her and smiled. The grocer said he sure was a lucky man to get such a nice girl to cook for him. Mr. Hutton said, 'Yes, she's always going to cook my meals from now on.'"

Occupying the witness stand the greater part of last week, Miss St. Pierre, a Pasadena nurse, declared Hutton jilted her to marry Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist.

DECLARES HEALTH MARRED

Miss St. Pierre's sister, Mrs. Mildred McCafferty, testified the nurse was in excellent health until Hutton "threw her over" and since then has been unable to sleep and eat regularly and has been hysterical and nervous.

Prior to her cross-examination, Miss St. Pierre had pictured the bass-singing husband of Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, as something of a Don Juan, who overcame her with his love-making and betrayed her under promise of marriage. Mark Jones, Hutton's attorney, asked:

"Isn't it true that about April, 1931, you told the woman who introduced you to Hutton that you did not care anything about him because he was nothing but a mamma's boy and a sissy?"

"No, I did not. Indeed, I never called David such a thing. Never, never did I say such a thing."

The second week of the trial opened in a storm of protest as Miss St. Pierre's counsel accused Hutton's attorneys of "stealing" three witnesses after they had been supenaed to testify for the nurse. The witnesses were Virginia Stevens, Edgar Ebens and Lloyd Curry, all friends of Miss St. Pierre.

'Aimee Held Liable For Film Scenario

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—(AP.)—A Superior Court judgment late yesterday held Aimee McPherson Hutton, evangelist, and J. Roy Stewart, motion picture director, jointly liable for the payment of $10,000 to Harvey H. Gates, scenario writer.

Judge Arthur Crum held the proposed film production was a "joint venture" of Mrs. Hutton and Stewart. The picture was never made.

BANK SOUND, DAWES SAYS

CHICAGO, June 28.—(AP.)—Gen. Charles Gates Dawes resumed chairmanship of the $28,000,000 Central Republic Bank and Trust Company yesterday, saw its stock plunge from the $47 bid and $49 asked of Saturday to $1 bid and $4 asked, and announced later his bank was in "an impregnable cash position" through recent loans.

He definitely set at rest rumors circulated recently in La Salle street that the Central Republic contemplated liquidating or merging with the $75,000,000 Continental Illinois Bank and Trust Company.

Gen. Dawes' statement said:

"The demands on the Central Republic Bank and Trust Company during past weeks made necessary the recourse to borrowing to meet them. These loans have been completed and place the bank in an impregnable cash position. The loans negotiated are for current requirements and to pay depositors and are not for the purpose of liquidation."

Directors of the bank made no statement concerning the precipitous plunge of the bank's stock price. It is understood that the Central Republic asked and obtained the co-operation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, New York correspondent banks, and four Chicago banks.

REFRIGERATION INDUSTRY BRISK

Leads Economic Field in Activity; Concern Here to Celebrate Firm's New Goal

A total of 2,250,000 Frigidaires has been sold to date, according to word received from the company's headquarters at Dayton, O., by Al Hattenbach, president of the Suburban Electric Development Company, the distributor for Pittsburgh and a large section of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Hattenbach said,

"For 16 years Frigidaire has been a leader in the refrigeration industry. It has sold a million more refrigerators than any other concern. Today its equipment is found in hundreds of thousands of kitchens, in all kinds of retail food establishments and many manufactories.

"It has developed water cooling equipment, milk cooling equipment, electric water coolers and very recently introduced automatic air conditioning equipment suitable for the store and office."

In celebration of the sale of the two million, two hundred thousandth Frigidaire, Mr. Hattenbach's dealer organization this week will conduct a special "Two Cylinder Showing," in which one of the fundamental features of all Frigidaire products will be emphasized.

Mr. Hattenbach said:

"In Frigidaire, all mechanical units are powered with a two-cylinder compressor, instead of one-cylinder compressor."

"With many well established makes of electric refrigerators on the market, augmented by scores of newcomers, it is becoming increasingly difficult for the prospective purchaser to reach a satisfying and well grounded decision, when it comes to an actual selection.

"First, the prospective buyer ought to be reasonably sure that the manufacturer is going to remain in business.

"Next he ought to investigate the experience of the manufacturer and his friends' and neighbors' opinions.

"At present, there are hundreds of people considering the purchase of a refrigerator.

"To enable them to receive necessary information before buying, we have arranged to place our entire dealer and sales organization at the disposal of the public."

According to Mr. Hattenbach, the Suburban Electric Development Company has been doing a steadily increasing business with the new Frigidaire-Moraine models, which were placed on the market a few months ago.

Storm-Tossed Plane Crashes, Flier Dies

PORT WASHINGTON, N. Y., June 28.—(AP.)—A storm-tossed airplane, which terrified hundreds of Long Island residents for almost an hour, finally crashed last night, killing an Army corporal and critically injuring a reserve lieutenant.

Returning to Mitchel Field from anti-aircraft practice off Fort Tilden, the plane plane was caught in a torrential thunderstorm. The dead man was Corp. Gilbert Burnett, 23. The pilot, Lieut. T. J. Creedon, 30, was believed to be dying.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A Major Catastrophe

An Overcall in a suit bid by opponents, after partner has opened the bidding, is generally a mild Slam try and sometimes an extremely strong Slam try. The Overcall in a suit bid by opponents, if they have opened the bidding, is a Forcing bid to game, which partner may not pass. This bid, whether used as a Slam try or as a Forcing bid over opponents' opening, is one of the most interesting and spectacular bids in Bridge, but players using it should be careful not to get their signals crossed in a manner which was related to me recently by a brilliant young player who held the South hand pictured below.

North—Dealer.

North and South vulnerable

	♠— ♡K J 10 7 2 ♢A 5 ♣K J 8 7 6
♠J 10 8 6 4 ♡6 5 4 ♢J 7 4 ♣5 2	North / West East / South	♠A K Q 9 7 3 2 ♡— ♢9 6 3 2 ♣Q 4
	♠— ♡A Q 9 8 3 ♢K Q 10 8 ♣A 10 9 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
		1 ♡	3 ♠ (1)
4 ♠ (2)	Double	Pass (3)	Pass
5 ♠ (4)	Pass	Pass (5)	Pass

(1) East seeks to impede the exchange of information between his vulnerable opponents. As will be seen, he cannot be severely penalized.

(2) South visions a possible Grand Slam and clearly indicates that the North and South holdings must be of at least Small Slam caliber.

(3) While West's Double permits North to pass, the hand contains additional values and North should disclose these by a bid of five clubs.

(4) A beautiful, if spectacular bid. If no part of North's honor strength is in spades, South wants to bid seven. If North responds with no-trump, inferring spade strength, then South will be content to play for six.

(5) A most amazing pass, but the fine inferences to be drawn from his partner's bid entirely escape him.

The result was that North and South were defeated 1,300 points on a hand in which a Grand Slam in hearts was laid down—a swing of 3,800 points on a single hand.

No matter how fine the methods provided for reaching the correct bid, their value depends upon the co-operation of the partnership.

OFFICE COOLED TO AID STAFF

BOULDER CITY, Nev., June 28.—Almost within sight of the narrow walls of Black Canyon, where the $125,000,000 Hoover Dam project is centered, modern engineering skill and Mother Nature are battling to determine who shall be victor, terrific heat or machinery. Machinery is winning.

In the headquarters building of the Bureau of Reclamation, Department of the Interior, where the engineers responsible for the gigantic water conservation and power project work, Frigidaire air conditioners are functioning in the face of daily temperatures of 100 to 120 degrees. They maintain the atmosphere at such a comfortable point occupants of the building are as efficient as though they were in a cool mountain resort.

The contract was awarded by R. F. Walter, chief engineer of the reclamation bureau, following experiences last summer when many men collapsed from the intense and blistering heat.

The air conditioning units, a recent development of General Motors, were installed in May and went into operation June 1, when, according to the engineers in charge, "it was only 97 degrees and the temperature was reduced 2° degrees within a half hour."

Boulder City is the model city built by the government on the Nevada desert seven miles from the damsite and 40 miles from Las Vegas.

Frigidaire air conditioners, the engineers say, cool, dehumidify and circulate the air in the hot and sultry periods, and heat, humidify and circulate it in the opposite periods. They may be installed in place of existing radiators.

You needn't know anything about mechanics to understand why a two-cylinder power unit is so much smoother, quieter and more economical than one with a single cylinder. It's all a matter of balance, one cylinder counterbalancing the other in operation—just as one bucket of water counterbalances the other when two are carried together.

Powered for the hottest weather

with 2 cylinders instead of 1

Even the very lowest priced Frigidaire is Super-Powered. Even the smallest model today has two cylinders instead of one . . . both packed with power you cannot exhaust on even the hottest day.

You don't have to wait long hours for ice to freeze. You don't have foods that must be thrown away when the weather turns warm. You get speedy action in freezing desserts. You have power you can depend upon regardless of summer of kitchen heat . . . power you have a right to expect when you buy an electric refrigerator.

Frigidaire's two-cylinder unit runs more slowly . . . that means there is less wear . . . longer life. There is greater smoothness, greater quietness, greater economy. And with the new low prices now in effect the Super-Powered Frigidaire can be bought for as little as $130 f. o. b. Dayton. Easy terms. Visit our showroom today.

HOUSEWIVES WANT FOOD KEPT AT SAFE TEMPERATURE

FAVOR STORES WITH MODERN EQUIPMENT

Frigidaire Popular for Commercial Refrigeration; Service Advantages Cited

Whether the housewife has an electric refrigerator in her home or is still numbered among the group that "expects to own one some day," she is fully familiar with its advantages and likes to shop with grocers and meat dealers who have this type of equipment to protect perishables.

She knows that the foods offered for sale have been kept at a safe temperature in the store, and that, thanks to interstate commerce laws, they have been held at the same low safe temperatures, in transit and in the warehouse.

This is one of the reasons why so many retailers in this city have installed Frigidaire commercial refrigerating equipment, according to Al Hattenbach, president of the Suburban Electric Development Company, local distributor.

Mr. Hattenbach said:

"Aside from the big advantage of better customer service, there is this further advantage—commercial Frigidaire equipment prevents spoilage, eliminates waste, cuts down refrigeration costs, cuts down labor costs and gives better opportunity for display.

"Many retailers prefer this equipment because it is backed by a three-year guarantee.

"The name 'Frigidaire' on such equipment means a lot to their customers, practically all of whom know that it is built by General Motors."

LAUSANNE, June 28.—Chancellor Franz von Papen's cherished dream of a Franco-German political and military alliance, which a few days ago promised to make the Lausanne conference a milestone in the history of European co-operation, was wrecked today on the shoals of Prussian pride.

Influential public opinion at home, conveyed to him during the week-end visit to Berlin, forced Von Papen to drop his plan, with the result that the French and German delegations drifted dangerously apart and were united again for continued discussion only by the intervention of Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald, of Britain, who brought Premier Herriot, of France, and Von Papen together this afternoon for a parley in private at his headquarters.

Mike Moran, caddymaster of that colorful group of caddies at South Park, announced today he would resign. The County Commissioners voted last week to remove Mike, a former prizefighter, from the job, but Mike explained today that he was quitting. He said:

"There are 350 unemployed coal miners and strikebreakers working as caddies at the park, and I can't satisfy them all."

One of the 350 caddies, Louis Cerar, was discharged, but reprimanded and ordered to pay $6.90 costs by Justice of the Peace J. O. O'Rourke last night. He had been arrested for tearing up a petition to the commissioners which urged Mike's retention.

Receivers Named For Erie Company

Judge Nelson McVicar today appointed A. W. Mitchell, of Erie, and S. Watts Bowher, of New York, receivers for the Erie Malleable Iron Company, of Erie. Joint bond was set at $25,000. The bill of complaint, filed June 2, alleged the company, with assets totaling $2,257,000, was unable to meet maturing obligations.

BELL RETURNED TO BUFFALO

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 28.—(AP.)—Indicted on two counts of perjury, Tony Bell, former county detective, is back in the Buffalo, N. Y., prison today to finish a term on conviction of extortion and impersonating a federal officer.

Indictments were returned yesterday on order of Judge S. John Morrow on the basis of statements Bell made in the trial of R. C. Bledsoe and Cosmo Stengoni, tried and acquitted of the murder of Constable Jack Donohoe.

Bell, also acquitted of the crime, recently confessed and named Bledsoe and Stengoni. Last week he reiterated his confession from the witness stand. The defense branded the testimony as "a lie."

Following reporting of the indictments, Bell and Ted Dawson, also a witness at the trial, were taken to Buffalo in custody of a deputy U. S. marshal.

BOND GRANTED IN DEATH CASE

LOGAN, W. Va., June 28.—(AP.)—Harry Robertson, president of the Logan City Commission, was released under $10,000 bond yesterday, an hour after his hearing on a charge of slaying Mrs. Mamie Thurman, wife of a policeman, had been continued until July 7.

Robertsons bond was not opposed by Prosecuting Attorney L. P. Hager. No bond was asked for Clarence Stephenson, Negro employe of Robertson, who also is charged with the slaying.

Robertson went immediately to his home.

The hearing for the commissioner and the Negro was postponed by Magistrate L. W. Hatfield upon request of Con Chafin, retained by Jack Thurman, the slain woman's husband, to assist the prosecution.

AZOAN GRANTED RECOGNITION

Recognition of the Azoan, women's group of the Alpha Zeta Omega, international pharmaceutical fraternity, as an auxiliary, was one of the important subjects being discussed before the annual convention at the William Penn Hotel, which closes tomorrow.

Today's convention session was given over to a social and sports program. The 100 delegates and friends were holding an outing at Rakuen Lake. A banquet tonight, at which Dr. C. Leonard O'Connell, of the University of Pittsburgh, will speak, is to be followed by a stag smoker. A bridge party has been arranged for women guests.

Election of officers will be held tomorrow. A formal ball will close the convention at night. David Dyen, of Philadelphia, supreme directorum, is presiding at the meetings and Joseph Shear is chairman of the convention committee.

Receivers Asked For Printing Firm

A receivership action was filed in Federal Court today against the Ormiston Press, Inc., 32 Boulevard of the Allies, by the Chatfield and Woods Company. The plaintiff company says it has a claim of $7,000 for rent and $3,087 for paper. While the Ormiston company has $124,612.58 assets, it is unable to meet its obligations, it is alleged. R. C. Sproul and G. A. Ormiston were named receivers.

CUBS LOSE 21 OF LAST 34 CONTESTS

IN DROPPING ANOTHER decision yesterday, thereby adding half a game to Pittsburgh's lead and muffing an opportunity to recapture first place from the idle Pirates, Rogers Hornsby's Cubs wound up a trip that confirmed early impressions they would not look nearly so good on the road as at home. On this latest tour the Bruins won only seven games while losing 13. Their slide goes back even farther, for of their last 34 contests they won only 13.

Rogers Hornsby

But for Lonnie Warneke, who has won nine out of 12 games this season and four of his last five, the Chicago club would have skidded a much greater distance from the top. Root has lost six of his last nine, Grimes six of his last seven, Malone four of his last five, and Bush four of his last six. Smith has won only two games all season. That the Cubs are still so close to the peak after losing 21 of their last 34 games shows how nearly even the other clubs have been holding one another except for the Pirates and Phillies. The lowest championship percentage in years may win the pennant. A year ago today the percentage with which Pittsburgh is now leading the league would have meant only fourth place.

THOUGH THE RUMOR has persisted in some quarters that eventually the St. Louis American League club will be shifted to Milwaukee, Phil Ball, who owns the clubs in both cities, again denies that he has any intention of making the shift. He says the problem is one of team strength rather than geography.

"St. Louis will not support a losing club, and neither would Milwaukee," Ball said. "I believe that with a few changes the Browns would be strong enough to make trouble for any of them and become money makers in St. Louis. We need a third baseman, and another pitcher would come in handy."

MEL OTT, who joined the Giants when he was only 16 and has been annually listed as the infant of the club, has lost the distinction of being the youngest outfielder on the New York roster. Joe Moore has supplanted him.

Moore, recently brought in from Jersey City in an option exchange for Len Koenecke, is only 22. Ott is 23. Joe was bought from San Antonio originally by the Giants and farmed to Bridgeport last year. He is a slender little fellow, scaling only 155 pounds, but hits a ball hard and far from the port side.

WITH 11 WEEKS of the season gone, Max Carey says he is more convinced than ever that Brooklyn got all the better of the trade in which he swapped Babe Herman, Ernesto Lombardi and Wally Gilbert to the Reds for Joe Stripp, Tony Cuccinello and Clyde Sukeforth. He says Cincinnati got merely two good hitters in Herman and Lombardi, whereas the Dodgers got two regular ball players and a catcher good enough to be a regular on any club. Max points out that if Lombardi were still with Brooklyn, that club could not give him any more work than is being given to Sukeforth. So nothing has been lost there, he figures, and he adds that Brooklyn has done well enough without Herman—that Hack Wilson has been more valuable to the Dodgers as a rightfielder, home-run slugger and run producer this year than Herman has been to the Reds.

Tony Cuccinello

CAREY GOES TO the double-play column in the club fielding records to show where Cincinnati lost ground in the deal. The Reds have made only 51 double plays, fewer than any other club in the National League. Last year they led both major circuits.

"That seems to sum up the situation," Max remarks. "Last season, the Reds equaled the major league record, held by themselves, by making 194 double plays, with Cuccinello setting a world record at second base by figuring in 128. This year Cincinnati is eighth in double plays, so you can see what they lost and Brooklyn gained."

IN PAST YEARS, Jimmy Foxx showed a habit of starting out strongly in hitting and slowing up in the second half of the season, but Gordon Cobbledick reports many American League men to be of the opinion that he will be a more formidable batter for the full length of the present campaign than ever before.

This for the reason that Foxx has made an important change in his style. The same alteration is held to explain the improvement shown by Jimmy so far this season, both in home-run slugging and in general hitting as compared with his average of only .291 a year ago.

HERETOFORE FOXX HAS been what is known as a guess hitter. He didn't like curve balls. He stood up there trying to guess when the fast one would come. When he guessed correctly, the ball generally went for a long ride. But pitchers are pretty good guessers, too, and they outguessed Foxx so often that he never was the hitter he should have been. Connie Mack and other members of the Athletics urged him to stop guessing and hit what he saw, but Foxx thought he was getting along well enough and stuck to his system. But after falling below the .300 mark last year for the first time in his major league career, Jimmy decided to act on the advice of his mates, and now he's up there cutting and slashing at everything that's over or near the plate. No longer is he set only for a fast pitch. He's prepared for anything—fast one, curve or change of pace—and if it's within reach he takes a cut at it.

AS A FURTHER tribute to the sportsmanship that Max Schmeling showed all through the match with Jack Sharkey, it is recalled that he never suggested the slightest change in American customs. If the fight had taken place in Germany, there would not have been three German officials in charge.

The European system, devised to assure fair play, would have called for one American judge, one German judge, and a referee of neutral nationality—say an Englishman, an Italian or a Frenchman. Schmeling sought nothing like that when he risked his title, remembering that an American judge had given it to him on a foul.

THE DEPRESSION ISN'T keeping Stanford from looking forward to a big football season. Out at Pop Warner's home field they have made the Stanford stadium larger by 2,000 seats than ever before. The new capacity is 89,440.

Ben Eastman

The entire original seat structure, built in 1921, was torn out and replaced with steel sills and pedestals and new redwood seat boards. The 2,000 new seats were gained by building 1,000 inside the parapet wall and picking up another 1,000 by a scientific remeasuring of the whole space.

AMERICA'S STRENGTH IN the Olympic middle distances this year, it is predicted, will be the greatest that any single country has ever known for the world track carnival. Ben Eastman is considered unbeatable at 400 meters and virtually so at 800 meters. For the other events, Venzke, Brocksmith, Hallowell and Cunningham have been coming like the wind. The big question is whether or not some of them will leave their speed and stamina on the trial tracks. This can happen, for the collegians still have ahead of them two of their toughest meets on a strenuous schedule—the I. C. 4-A games at Berkley Friday and Saturday, and the final Olympic tryouts at Palo Alto two weeks later.

PITT AFFECTED BY RULING OF SCHOOLS

By JESS CARVER

Radio broadcasting of football games and the Eastern Intercollegiate Athletic Association have reached a definite parting of the ways. The radio, so far as Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Pitt, Penn, Dartmouth, Penn State, Columbia, Syracuse, Brown and West Point are concerned, is O-U-T, for the coming season at least, and the folks who do not wish to lay it on the line to see the big grid spectacles will have to depend upon the newspapers or the eyes and memories of more fortunate neighbors.

The Eastern Association voted yesterday to prohibit radio broadcasting of all football games played in their home stadia or under their jurisdiction next fall. This means that the Pitt-Notre Dame, Pitt-Carnegie Tech, Pitt-Stanford, Pitt-Ohio State and Carnegie Tech and W. and J. contests will not be on the air, unless by a relay broadcast by telegraph wire from the Pitt Stadium to station broadcasting rooms.

PITT AFFECTED

Athletic Director Harrison, of Pitt, who represented the local university at the meeting of the eastern group, indicated some time ago, when approached on the matter by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, that he was in favor of permitting broadcasting of local games, and the athletic council of the university had promised to give the matter consideration. Now, however, the matter has been taken out of the local institution's hands by the E. I. A. A.

Maj. Phil Fleming, of West Point, president of the association, in announcing the drastic action, said:

"We must take advantage of every opportunity to increase financial receipts of football games.

"It has been definitely established that radio cuts into attendance. It was with considerable reluctance we decided to forbid any broadcasting of games which we control, but since football is the only sport producing the money necessary to support our athletic programs we must take steps to derive all the financial benefits possible."

BIG TEN MAY FOLLOW

And that isn't all. John J. (Stay At Home) Fan may get another sock on the whiskers from the Big Ten, Western Conference to be precise. Maj. John L. Griffith, Western Conference athletic commissioner, wired from Chicago stating that a poll of the Big Ten athletic directors had found them unanimously in favor of banning football broadcasts. The Conference will take the matter up at the N. C. A. A. meeting in Pasadena July 28 and 29.

So it looks very much as if Messrs. Husing, Mundy, McNamee and Flannigan will have to brush up on their bed-time story telling this fall.

Pitt's annual coaching school gets under way today, Dr. Jock Sutherland, head football coach, offering a two weeks' course in gridiron tactics to inaugurate the sessions. Following the grid school, Dr. H. C. Carlson will give a course of instruction in basketball, Frank Shea in track and Drs. Ralph Shanor and George Moore, team physician and trainer, respectively, lessons in first aid for athletes.

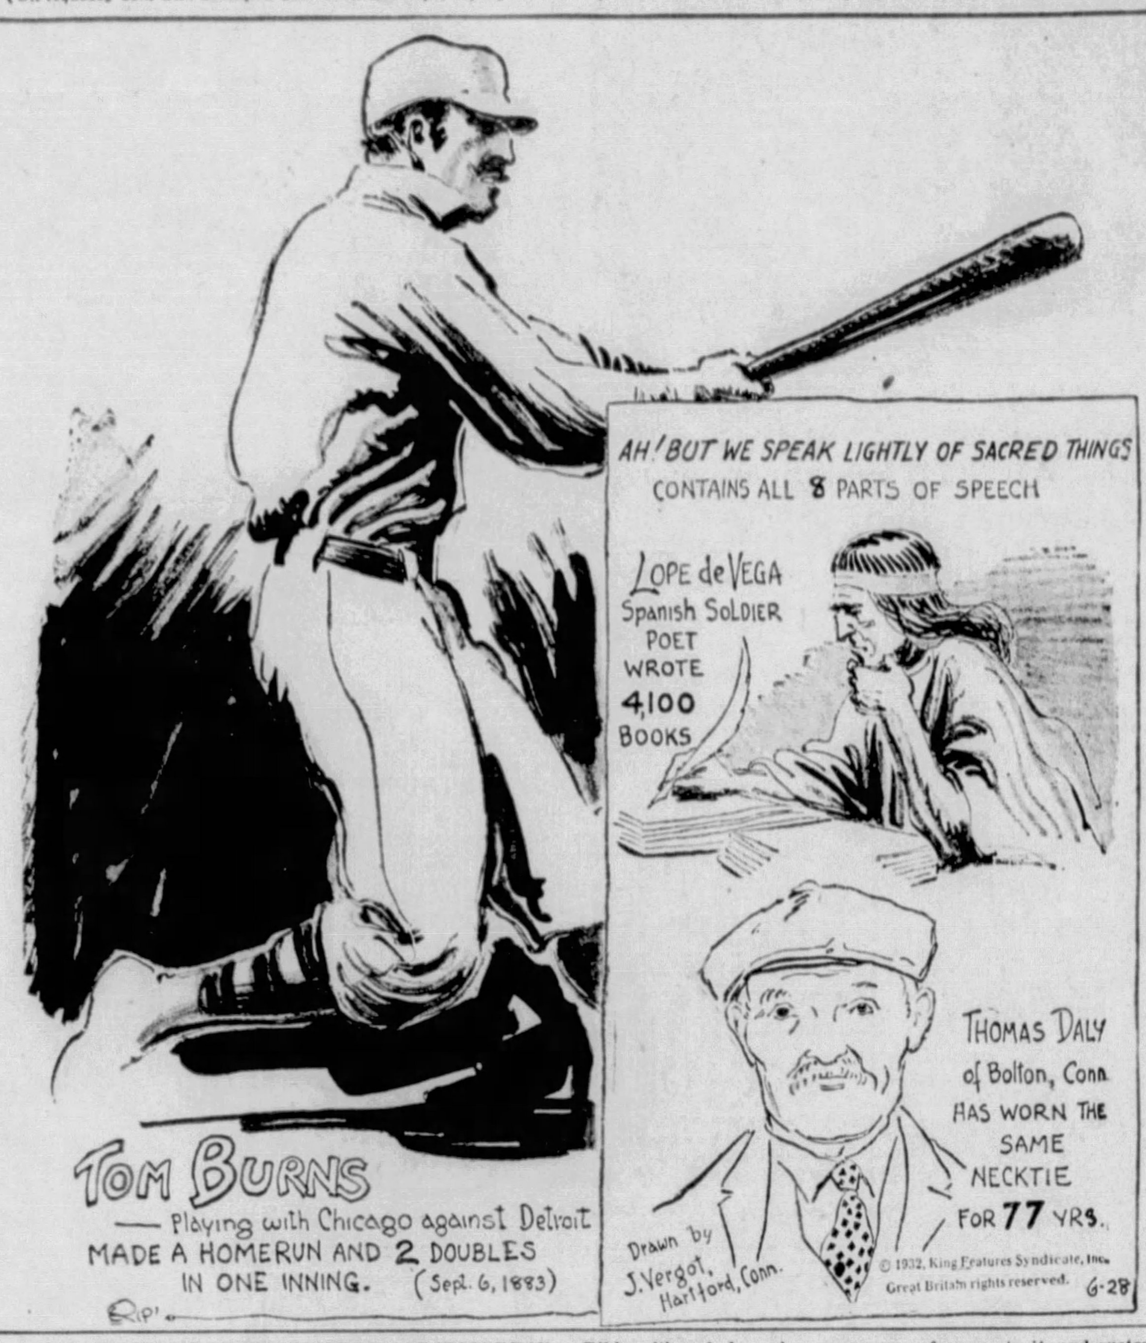
(On request, sent with stamped addressed envelope, Ripley will send proofs and details of anything depicted by him in these cartoons.)



EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: A NATIONAL CONTEST PRIZE WINNER—An all-expense trip through the Province of Quebec, Canada, for two people is the prize awarded to Col. L. S. Powers, of Hawesville, Ky., for his entry about the astouding Biblical knowledge of the Rev. M. L. Voyles, of Little Rock, Ark. For the past 16 years, Rev. Voyles has been engaged in evangelistic work in the Mississippi Valley, and during the time he is in the pulpit he never reads from his Bible, although he makes numerous references to it and quotes verses and chapters during his sermons. The demonstrations of his remarkable memory usually bring forth numerous queries from his congregations. Given a Biblical quotation he will, without hesitancy, quote the reference, as well as the exact verses preceding and following the quotation. In all this time he never has failed to quote correctly. Col. Powers and Rev. Voyles are making the trip to Canada together.

COLLEGE GOLF STARS TIED

HOT SPRINGS, Va., June 28.—(AP.)—Four youngsters from Princeton, Southern California, Colgate and Michigan yesterday tied for leadership in the first qualifying round of the National intercollegiate golf championship here. They scored 72's.

Playing the first 18-hole round of the 36-hole qualifying test over the long, wooded and cannily trapped Cascades course, Frederick Kammerer, of South Orange, N. J., and Princeton; Henry Kowal, of Utica, N. Y., and Colgate; Winston Fuller, of Los Angeles and Southern California, and John Fischer, of Cincinnati and Michigan, came within a stroke of par in their bid for medal round honors.

Two strokes back of the leaders came a pair of Yale golfers, Sidney Noyes, with 36-38-74, and J. E. Parker with 37-37-74.

John Howard, of Michigan; D. Gamble, of Yale, and Richard Kimbrough, of Harvard, had 75s, while Billy Howell, of Washington and Lee, and Done Moe, of Oregon, twin favorites to capture the title, were back with 76s, alongside M. J. Jaffee, of William and Mary; Robert Keppler, of Ohio State, a finalist a year ago, and Richard Gray, of Yale.

There were 34 golfers who broke 80. The golfers believed that a two-round total of 158 will be necessary to qualify today for the 32 places in tomorrow's match play contests.

Yale, with two players shooting 74s and one 75 and one 76, was slightly ahead of the other schools in the chase for team honors awarded to the low four-man squad after the 36-hole competition.

Three members of the Penn State squad, which was withdrawn from competition for the team trophy, failed to finish among the leaders. Fred Brand, Jr., of Pittsburgh, turned in an 81. Bill Nacios had an 80 and Chick Musser an 84. The State players, provided they can turn in scores in the high 70s today, have good chances of qualifying for the match play tomorrow.

STARS TO PLAY IN WESTERN

Perkins, who renounced his amateur status a month ago and then proceeded to set the pace at Fresh Meadow last Saturday, until Sarazen hit his home stretch stride, wired his entry in the Western Open from New York.

Expanding into fresh greenness under an all-day rain, Canterbury promises to be right when the field tees off Thursday morning.

Gov. La Follette Gets Metcalfe As Messenger

MADISON, Wis., June [illegible]—(AP.)—Gov. Philip F. La[illegible]ette will have swift-messenger service this summer.

Ralph Metcalfe, Negro sprinter from Marquette University, who has broken intercollegiate records in the dashes and is regarded as the outstanding American candidate to win in the Olympics has taken a temporary job to replace Sam Pierce, 72-year-old Negro messenger to the Governor.

PIGEON RECORD BROKEN

Red Boy, a racing pigeon, owned by Joe Kerner, Rotnpletz street, North Side, clipped approximately three hours from a record that had stood for 43 years when he flew from Warrington, Mo., to Pittsburgh, a distance of approximately 700 miles, in 12 hours, 36 minutes, 19 seconds.

LOCAL TURNER WINS TITLE

Local Turners are celebrating the triumph of George E. Wheeler, of Allentown Turners, who captured the decathlon championship at the midwestern turnfest at Fort Wayne, Ind., over the week-end. Wheeler scored 90.8 points.

Dale Noah, also of the Allentown team, tied for first place in the high jump with a leap of 5 feet 7 inches. Noah also won fifth place in the pentathlon event.

Peter Capella, of Charleroi, was second in the middle grade pentathlon competition, and Walter Goedeke, of East Pittsburgh, finished third.

BUCCOS DEEMED BETTER THAN 1921 TEAM

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

George Gibson's astounding return to the center of the baseball spotlight has captivated the game's followers all over the country, the fans feeling that Gibby has stolen a leaf from Rip Van Winkle's book without the permission of the copyright owners. Drooping out of the sport more than five years ago, George seemed destined to the long life of a contented and obscure Canadian farmer when fate chose him for an important role similar to one he played on life's stage back in 1921.

The sensational feats of the 1932 Pirates under Gibson naturally brings into relief the make-up of the other flag contender which went on the rocks in August after blazing a trail which was hardly in keeping with the caliber of the team.

1932 TEAM BEST

Personally, I think the first place entry now managed by Gibson has a greater aggregate skill than the peppery crew which, in the words of Casey Stengel, almost stole a flag in 1921. And Stengel did not refer to the larceny of the basepaths—he meant that an inferior club almost tricked up those contenders who had more potential strength.

Although it is difficult to find points of similiarity between the two colorful clubs, they did have this in common—neither was regarded as a flag contender when it went into spring training.

The 1921 club prepared at Hot Springs, Ark. One of the players that year was George Whitted, who had come to the Buccos from the Phillies, in 1919, in exchange for the same Stengel referred to earlier. Whitted had been a member of the famed Braves of 1914 and also of the flag-winning Phillies of the following year.

Whitted was one of the very few diamond critics who saw greatness in the 1921 club. At one of the meetings in Hot Springs George advised his mates that the team, provided each player hustled all the year, had a good chance for the flag. The suggestion caused a charitable smile, and Whitted then offered some reasons. He declared that neither the Braves nor the Phillies were composed of stars when they copped. George argued that spirit had more to do with pennants than star performers, his contention being that the average major leaguer was of high value when he showed fighting spirit.

NEW TEAM YOUNGER

The Buccos of that era razzed all opponents in a good-natured way. It is quite true that some of them did not toe the mark always in the point of discipline, and perhaps this defection was serious in the final disposition of the flag. Yet the team was not a great combination in the sense that the Athletics or Cardinals are great.

Gibby's present pace setters are somewhat younger collectively than their predecessors. Capt. Traynor is the only regular outside the pitching staff who has reached the 30-mark in years. The 1932 model does not have as much appeal in one sense, but it seems to have more skill and dash. Carey, Bigbee and Maranville were all fleet and smart baserunners, but in Piet, Traynor, Comorosky, Vaughan, Suhr and the Waner boys the present team has a collection of greyhounds that stands out anywhere.

IMPROVE POSITION

Another big point in favor of the 1932 team is to be found in the pitching department. The club that faltered 11 years ago had no sharpshooters to compare as a whole with Meine, Kremer, Swetonic, French, Spencer, Swift and Harris.

The Pirates strengthened their hold on first place yesterday as they spent the day in Dayton, O. The Cardinals plastered the Cubs in the final game of the series, so the Pittsburghers are leading by something more than one-half of a full game. The Buccos are slated to play in Marion, O., today. Last night's game with the Dayton Central League club was called off because of wet grounds. The Bucs are due back in Pittsburgh late tonight to be ready for the invasion of the Cardinals, who will be here for three battles, beginning Thursday.

Finn Star Sets New Javelin Mark

ABO, Finland, June 28.—(AP.)—Matti Jarvinen, of Finland, bettered the world record for the javelin throw yesterday, with a toss of 74.02 meters, or 242 feet 10 29-128 inches.

The listed world record for the javelin throw is 71.01 meters, 232 feet 11⅝ inches, set by E. H. Lundquist, of Sweden, at Stockholm in 1928.

U. S. WALKER CUP GOLF TEAM SELECTED

OUIMET NAMED LEADER; MUCH NEW TALENT

NEW YORK, June 28.—(AP.)—Selection of a squad of 10 players for the American Walker Cup team, which will meet a British team in the international golf matches at Brookline, Mass., September 1-2 was announced today by Herbert H. Ramsay, president of the United States Golf Association. The makeup of the team is as follows:

Francis Ouimet, of Boston, captain.
George T. Dunlap, Jr., of Princeton.
Billy Howell, of Richmond, Va.
Harrison R. (Jimmy) Johnston, of St. Paul.
Donald K. Moe, of Portland, Ore.
Maurice McCarthy, Jr., of New York.
Charles Seaver, of Los Angeles.
Jess W. Sweetser, of New York.
George J. Voight, of New York.
Jack Westland, Chicago.

FIVE NEW STARS CHOSEN

It is expected only eight will be named to play for the United States in defense of the cup, but the final selections will not be made by Capt. Ouimet until shortly before the matches.

The squad includes five of the younger generation of American amateur stars who never have played in Walker Cup competition, thereby fulfilling expectations that the U. S. G. A. would turn to "new blood" for the 1932 contest.

Of these five, McCarthy was named an alternate in 1930, but did not compete. The other newcomers are Westland, runner-up to Ouimet in the 1931 National championship; Howell, the sensational Virginian; Dunlap, intercollegiate champion, and Seaver, who has moved up rapidly in the last two years.

VETERANS KEEP PLACES

Ouimet, Johnston and Sweetser are veterans of most of the Walker Cup campaigns since the competition was launched in 1922. Voigt and Moe starred in the 1930 series, their first.

The United States never has been defeated in the international matches, in six contests with the British.

RAIN CHECKS NET PLAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN
Staff Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, June 28.—A continuous downpour wiped out all chance of action yesterday in the annual Ohio State men's singles net competition on tap here since Saturday at the Cleveland Tennis and Racquet Club. Pittsburgh entrants slated to contest in the local event and, later in the week, in the United States Inter-City doubles arrived shortly before the noon hour and spent the remainder of the day in idleness.

Today the Steel City troupe is billed to engage Buckeye opposition in initial round hostilities. Billy O'Loughlin, P. A. A. star, tackles Bill Brown to begin with and, if successful, advances toward Harold Bartel, Cleveland parks titleholder and fourth seeded contender, whom he would meet in bracket three.

KELLER MEETS PACE

Sam Keller, Duquesne driver, encounters Pace, Akron luminary, while Sullivan, O'Loughlin's Winged Head and inter-city dual team-mate, tries conclusions with Tom Hearley.

Seeded atop the Ohio man-to-man draw is Frankie Parker, Detroit flash and National boys' premier. Lester Stoefen, Los Angeles crack, is rated second.

Feminine stars entered include the powerful Cincinnatians, Clara Louise Zinke and Ruth Oexman, as well as Mrs. Barbara Duffy, ranking Forest City satellite. There are, to date, but seven teams listed for the inter-city milling, with the Detroiters, Parker and Reindel, apparently topping the group.

How I Won Heavyweight Title From Schmeling

By JACK SHARKEY

What are my impressions of my boxing match with Max Schmeling?

Now that the title bout is a matter of history and I am away from the tense excitement connected with the championship contest, I am better able to answer that question than I would have been a few hours after leaving the ring.

Somebody made the mistake of trying to make a boxer out of Schmeling. He is more of a fighter than a boxer, and would do better if he went back to his natural style. He's strong, tough, game, and a hard hitter, but he is only a fair-to-middlin' boxer.

When the gong sounded for the first round, I expected Schmeling to come rushing at me. But he didn't. Instead he stood off and tried to box. He sent straight left hands for my head.

This kind of a battle was right down my alley. Since I started in the ring game, nobody has ever outboxed me. So I started shooting straight, stiff lefts at Max. Most of my jabs were faster than his, and scored repeatedly as he came plodding in gamely.

Beats Max With Lefts

Scores With Rights, Too

In the early rounds, I became convinced I knew too much about boxing for the young German. Schmeling showed a splendid spirit, and a desire to land heavy blows, but he didn't know how to get his best punches across. He should learn that knack with more experience.

I realized that Schmeling would start tossing right hand punches for the jaw. Max is a head puncher, and could not resist the temptation to shoot for my chin. I had a pre-battle plan as to what I would do under such conditions. I decided to feint Schmeling into letting his right hand drive, pull out of range of the punch, and then counter with my own right.

It is discouraging enough to miss with a right hand punch, but it is much more so when your opponent counters with his right. A boxer who misses with a right hand is off balance, and is quite easy to hit with a right hand wallop.

I repeatedly feinted Schmeling into leading with his right for my jaw, pulled out of range without moving my feet, and then belted him on the jaw with my right.

Pegged With 'Sneak' Blows

Schmeling was most dangerous when breaking out of a clinch, or after I had pushed him back on the breakaway. He would then try to sneak over right hand punches to the jaw.

Max nailed me three times with those sneak shots. They were short blows, but they had much power behind them.

WOOD BEATEN, VINES WINS AT WIMBLEDON

WIMBLEDON, England, June 28.—(AP.)—Sidney Wood, Jr., youthful American defender of the British tennis championship, was eliminated today in the quarter-finals by Jiro Satoh, of Japan. The scores were 7-5, 7-5, 2-6, 6-4.

Ellsworth Vines, Jr., the American champion, won his match from Enrique Maier, champion of Spain, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

Vines' victory advanced him to the semi-finals in his first quest of the British title.

The Californian gave his most impressive performance thus far in conquering the hard-hitting Spaniard. Maier's powerful service was his principal weapon, but he was seldom a match for Vines from the baseline.

Helen Jacobs and Elizabeth Ryan advanced in the women's doubles by defeating the English pair, Miss N. Trentham and Mrs. R. M. Turnbull, 6-1, 4-6, 6-1.

In the mixed doubles, Mrs. Anna Harper, of San Francisco, and Ian Collins, of England, defeated Miss V. H. Montgomery and G. R. Sherrell, of England, 7-5, 6-3.

The American mixed doubles pair, Sarah Palfrey and Gregory Mangin, lost in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4, to the British combination of Kathleen Stammers and E. D. Andrews.

Stanley Hack's Wife Wins Tennis Title

CHICAGO, June 28.—(AP.)—Mrs. Dorothy Weisel Hack, of Sacramento, Cal., wife of the Chicago Cub infielder, won the Western women's singles tennis championship, after a short, sharp battle with Catherine Wolf, of Elkhart, Ind., yesterday.

The match, interrupted by rain Sunday, with each victor in one set, was resumed at the South Shore Country Club. Miss Wolf got away in front, but the Californian speeded up and as her opponent tired, went on to win the deciding set, 11-9.

Beaumont Captures First Half Title

BEAUMONT, Tex., June 28.—(AP.)—The Beaumont Exporters cinched the first half championship of the Texas League yesterday by defeating Fort Worth, 6 to 2.

With the half season formally closing today, Houston is assured of second place, regardless of the outcome of its two remaining games and Beaumont's one.

Beaumont has won 48 games and lost 26. Houston has won 47 and lost 28. The disparity in the number of contests was caused by rain which resulted in cancellation of two Beaumont games.

BIG TURNOVER DUE JULY 1

NEW YORK, June 28.—(AP.)—Although many dividends have been reduced, and some passed entirely, approximately $300,000,000 will be paid out in dividends by American corporations on July 1.

The outflow will lend a substantial addition to the investment public's supply of money and by far the greater part of it is expected to find its way promptly back into circulation.

In addition to dividend payments, American corporations will distribute $500,000,000 in interest payments to bondholders.

July 1 is the most important summer settlement day of the year. Total payments by corporations on that date are equalled only by their January 1 disbursements.

A leading statistical organization, which lists virtually every corporation in which there is a public investment, estimates that approximately 1 out of 9 are still paying dividends. Nearly 6,000 corporations are included in this study, ad approximately 650 of them are continuing dividend payments.

With money rates now at abnormally low levels, reflecting little turnover in the money market, the banks will welcome the chance to churn things up a little and get an added amount of it back into public circulation.

New Rail - River Coal Rates Do Not Increase Pittsburgh Shipments.

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

COAL PRODUCERS in this district rapidly are arriving at the opinion that the rates put into effect by the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad on ex-river coal moving from Colona to Youngstown are not sufficiently low to create traffic over the new route.

The establishment of the new rate schedule and the building of facilities for transferring coal from barges to cars at Colona follows a struggle between the coal companies and the railroads lasting four years. The coal companies wanted to take advantage of low cost water transportation to move their product part of the distance from river mines in this vicinity to industrial users near Youngstown. They believed that this would give them a better opportunity to compete for this business with producers in other fields.

Fight Opened in 1928 By Pittsburgh Coal

THE FIRST GUN in the fight was fired by the Pittsburgh Coal Company in March, 1928, when it bought the Pittsburgh, Lisbon and Western Railroad. The company then applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to build two extensions to this line. One would extend south to the Ohio River at Smiths Ferry.

The other would extend north to Youngstown. It was planned to establish a rate on this new route which would make it cheaper to send the coal down the Ohio to Smiths Ferry and then by rail to Youngstown than by the all-rail route now in general use.

The leading railroads opposed this plan bitterly. First of all, it directly threatened the loss of a large amount of business between Pittsburgh mines and Youngstown. Second there was an implied threat that once the new route was put into operation, a similar low rate would be instituted on hauls of coal to lake ports for shipment to the Northwest. This would have upset the established differentials between Pittsburgh and other districts on coal moving to the lakes.

Commission Objects To Planned Extension

THE INTERSTATE Commerce Commission refused to grant permission for construction of the extensions to the Pittsburgh, Lisbon and Western, but it ordered the other coal carrying roads to provide the new service which would have been supplied by the Pittsburgh, Lisbon and Western. The Pittsburgh Coal Company, early in 1929, reopened the case when it bought the Youngstown and Suburban Railway Company, which have formed a part of the proposed new rail route. It was again overruled by the commission.

Following the commission's order the railroads first filed new tariff schedules which were sufficiently high to prevent the profitable use of the combination of rail and river transportation. The commission then ruled that these rates were excessive and ordered the railroads to submit new schedules. This resulted in the construction of the new terminal at Colona by the Pittsburgh and West Virginia and the filing of a rate of 77 cents a ton, plus a 6-cent emergency charge and 12 cents for transferring the coal from barges to cars. This makes a total cost of 95 cents which compares with a all-rail rate of $1.34 plus a 6-cent emergency charges. This leaves a margin of 45 cents a ton to cover the cost of the river transportation and to provide a saving.

The coal companies claim that this margin is not sufficient for them to secure the Youngstown business at a saving. The original tariff planned over the Pittsburgh, Lisbon and Western would have created a margin 17 cents greater.

STOCK MARKET TURNS DOWN AFTER RALLY

U. S. Steel Equities Sag To New Bottom Prices; Allied Dividend Surprise

NEW YORK, June 28.—(AP.)—A mixture of both good and bad news for stockholders kept the share market teetering uncertainly today, with a rather decided dip after midday.

The list firmed momentarily at the opening, and pushed up rather briskly toward midday, as shorts were surprised by payment of the regular dividend of $1.50 by Allied Chemical, but weakness of Coca Cola, followed by Santa Fe, soon carried the list off again.

Coca-Cola dropped 3 points. Santa Fe slumped more than 2 to the lowest since the 1890's, as no action was taken on the dividend. American Telephone and Union Pacific sagged a point or so, and United States Steel common and preferred, fractionally, to new bottom prices, after showing temporary gains of a point in the morning. Gains of 3½ points in Allied Chemical, and more than 8 in Auburn, were largely lost, as well as a 2-point upturn in American Can. General Foods and Norfolk and Western were about steady, apparently having discounted dividend cuts.

The rails generally had an interval of firmness in the early trading, despite distinctly adverse May earnings reports. The report of freight car loadings, appearing later in the morning, showed a gain of 16,649 cars for the week ended June 18, over the previous week, but this may have been partly due to the flurry of activity in anticipation of the new high excise taxes. The failure of Santa Fe directors to order a dividend was easily understandable in the light of May earnings.

Norfolk and Western's cut to $2 from $2.50 in its quarterly payment was not unexpected, although its earnings have held up relatively well. This carrier's earnings are normally best in the latter months of the year.

The break in Coca Cola went unaccounted for by tangible news developments, although professionals have sometimes sold the stock on agitation for legalization of beer, on the theory that it would be hurt by such competition, and the wet moves at the Democratic convention may have inspired more of that sort of selling.

A constructive development, which may have been a factor in the early upturn, was the announcement that the Central Republic Bank of Chicago had been provided with sufficient cash to pay off every depositor, should the depositors wish it. Bankers pointed to this as a striking example of banking solidarity.

WHEAT PRICES ADVANCE

CHICAGO, June 28.—Grain prices tended upward early today, influenced by relative strength of wheat quotations at Liverpool and by reports that stocks of wheat there were insufficient. Improvement of financial conditions in Chicago was also a bullish factor. Opening unchanged to ⅜c higher, wheat afterward advanced all around. Corn, which also started unchanged to ¾c up, held near the initial limits.

Abatement of nervousness among wheat traders was apparent, and during much of the time there was no selling pressure of consequence. The fact that weather developments were more favorable for harvest operations southwest acted, however, as a check on price upturns. Scattered liquidating sales by holders of July contracts were readily absorbed by spreaders who in turn sold the distant month.

Corn and oats were steadied by wheat price upturns. Provisions reflected firmness of hog values.

Normal Buying Stimulated By Unique Values

By B. C. FORBES

Values are beginning to appeal.

Oftener than once in the last fortnight I have heard my wife and her women friends discuss bargains which they found irresistible. Dresses, apparently, have been drastically reduced. So have coals, especially fur coats.

Mr. Forbes

They describe furniture as "cheaper than ever before." Children's clothing also is now very attractively priced. Two pairs of shoes, I gather, can be purchased for what used to be the price of one pair.

There are multiplying signs that people are becoming sick and tired of self-denial. Those who still have the means are starting to succumb to the temptation of alluringly low prices. Hoarding of resources, long practiced with more or less bravado, is losing its fascination.

In short, human nature promises to reassert itself. The abnormal is giving way to normal.

Let this spirit become general, and the solution of most of our economic problems will be set in motion. Just as curtailed buying has meant curtailed production, so increased buying will mean increased production.

ONE NEW ORLEANS department store has started a vigorous, sustained advertising campaign built around the slogan:

"Let's stir things up."

The central theme is:

"Never before in the memory of those of us now living has the dollar bought more than it buys today."

Here is another declaration:

"We assume a great responsibility when we make such a definite statement as, 'Now is the time to buy,' but we feel it so sincerely that we do not hesitate to urge it. If you and I—all of us—agree now, to the extent of our capabilities, to buy the things that we need, the kettles of industry throughout the United States will soon be stirred up and stores will be calling on manufacturers to make more goods.'

Is there not in this a timely suggestion for merchants in other communities throughout the country?

Here's an unusual slant: A rubber leader welcomes the new tax on tires and tubes! Says W. O'Neil:

"The federal tax on tires and tubes, which has just become effective, is a blessing in disguise—to industry, to workmen in tire factories and to motorists themselves. It was the one thing needed to make motorists realize that they have been buying tires at prices far less proportionately than they have been paying for other necessities of life. Tire prices had fallen 20 per cent below the average cost of living.

"Millions of motorists, on unsafe tires, had been putting off buying the safe, new rubber they needed, thinking possibly the price might drop again. Now, many thousands have become convinced that tire prices have reached their nadir. For some weeks there has been an actual shortage of tires."

ALL ECONOMIC history convinces that when the general price level advances, there will be a scramble to buy. Such a day should not be distant.

PUBLIC BLINDED TO POSSIBILITY OF RECOVERY

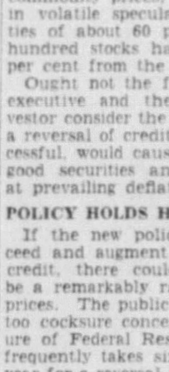
By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 28.—The same fatal astigmatism which blinded the financial public to the clouds forming on the business horizon in 1929, now closes its eyes to the possibilities of recuperation.

The future is, of course, in a sense unknowable and unpredictable, but the level of bond prices, stock prices, and commodity prices, ignoring limitations on foresight, nevertheless expresses a pessimistic prediction concerning the future. What if the new credit expansion policy of the Federal Reserve System, toward which many bankers and business men are still skeptical, should prove effective in arresting deflation? Suppose the central banking authorities should have the courage to go ahead with their bold open market policy until they boost excess bank reserves, if necessary to achieve results, from approximately $300,000,000 to half a billion dollars? The banks will not forever permit unproductive excess reserve to pile up while their own earnings approach the vanishing point.



Mr. Rukeyser

30 PER CENT SHRINKAGE

The sagacious manager, who hedges against the uncertainties of the future, recognizes that the deflation in bank credit has amounted to 13 billion dollars, which, in relation to average computed growth of production and trade, means a relative shrinkage of nearly 30 per cent since October, 1929. This same deflation, expressed in other terms, has resulted in a 40 per cent decline in commodity prices, and a setback in volatile speculative commodities of about 60 per cent. Four hundred stocks have declined 80 per cent from the peak.

Ought not the forward looking executive and the scientific investor consider the possibility that a reversal of credit policy, if successful, would cause a scarcity of good securities and commodities at prevailing deflated prices?

POLICY HOLDS HOPE

If the new policy should succeed and augment the supply of credit, there could theoretically be a remarkably rapid uprush of prices. The public should not be too cocksure concerning the failure of Federal Reserve policy; it frequently takes six months or a year for a reversal of credit policy to bring fruitful results in the realm of business and employment.

If the subtle campaign for controlled credit expansion should, in the last analysis fail, the financial analyst should not neglect to give weight to the probable political demand for a cruder form of inflation. The lesson of history should not be ignored. John Maynard Keynes, British economist, in his "essays in persuasion," says:

"The power of taxation by currency depreciation is one which has been inherent in the state since Rome discovered it. The creation of legal tender has been and is a government's ultimate reserve; and no state or government is likely to decree its own bankruptcy or its downfall so long as this instrument still lies at hand unused."

I. C. C. Revaluation Fund Cut Blocked

WASHINGTON, June 28.—(INS.)—An effort to slash the Interstate Commerce Commission's 1933 fund for railroad valuation work down to $750,000 was defeated yesterday in the Senate.

The Senate Appropriations Committee's amendment, reducing the fund, was voted down, and the House appropriation of $2,750,000 restored.

Soft Coal Output Shows Small Gain

WASHINGTON, June 28.—(AP.)—Production of bituminous coal increased slightly during the week ended June 18, as compared with the previous week. In the summary that follows, the output is given for comparable periods, as reported by the United States Bureau of Mines: Week ended June 18, 4,000,000 tons; previous week, 3,975,000 tons; same week last year, 6,635,000 tons.

PUBLIC LINKS PLAYOFF TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

Dr. C. S. Brandom and Dick Wessell, who finished in a tie in the qualifying round for the Pittsburgh public links team recently, will meet at the Schenley Park links at 5 o'clock today in a playoff match to determine which of the two will be the fourth member of the local team. The playoff is necessary because expenses are available for only four members.

A big field, which included virtually all of the leading performers in the district, teed off today in a one-day invitation tourney for women at Shannopin.

Just to show how uncertain this golf game is, H. E. Marker, who hails from the Greensburg Country Club, and his son, H. E. Marker, Jr., practically unknown in the tourney, shot a 78 over a rain-soaked Fox Chapel layout, to lead home one of the classiest fields that ever competed in the annual Father and Sons' tourney yesterday. The 78, with an eight handicap, gave the Markers both low gross and low net prizes.

Following the Markers were the favorites in the event, Jock Graham, the wizard of South Hills, and his son, W. J. Graham, tied with A. K. Oliver and Joe Oliver, of the home layout, for second place, with a gross of 83. The Olivers were considered prime favorites to annex the crown held by the Tottens, of Stanton Heights. The Olivers won the title in 1930.

WOLFFS, JAMISONS TIE

Trailing these teams came Charles Wolff, of Highland, and his son, Regis, captain of the University of Pittsburgh golf team, and Tom Jamison and Tom Jamison, Jr., of Greensburg, with 85's.

For the first time since the tourney was started in 1922 W. C. Fownes and his son, Heinie, missed the affair. Illness prevented the former national amateur champion from playing.

CHARITY BENEFITS

It was decided to give the majority of the prize money to the Welfare fund. The defending champions, C. L. Totten and C. L. Jr., of Stanton Heights, shot an 89.

At Nemacolin yesterday, Guido Paroline, assistant pro at St. Clair, and his amateur partner, F. W. Berkley, carded a best-ball total of 68 to lead the field in the pro-amateur tourney staged under the auspices of the P. G. A. The score was four strokes under par.

In second place came Perry Del Vecchio, of Greensburg, and V. Manley, with a 71. Vincent Eldred, of Highland, and W. G. Clasby and Nelson Zimmerman and Dick Rowley tied for third with 72.

Dolp Cracks Par In Portland Play

Playing over the difficult Alderwood Country Club course, the Portland star went out in 34 and came back in 32. Par on the outgoing nine is 37 and the incoming 35.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist Says!

NEW YORK, June 28. — The best game of our recent western trip was the opener at Cleveland. I forget whether we won or lost it, but that game we played before 20,000 school kids. Folks, that's an audience that would thaw out a polar bear's heart.

Nick Altrock

Every play they yelled like all - get - out, and a run was as good as a tornado for raising the roof. As for Uncle Nick himself, he never did his stuff to such appreciation. Honestly, after that game I felt like turning in my uniform and joining Ringling's circus, where I could clown before kids every day.

Of course, no club can afford to let 20,000 children in free every day, but, after that Cleveland experience, I'm in favor of at least a lot more knotholes in the fence.

CHAMPS PLAN LINEUP SHIFT

Far from satisfied with the showing of the team in the first half of the race for the City League pennant, Managers George Falconer and Billy Fuchs, of the Dormont nine, defending champion, are expected to present a somewhat changed lineup this evening as the team squares off with Homewood in a City League engagement.

In exhibiting some new faces today, before the first half race is over, the Dormont pilots are anticipating the inauguration of play in the second half chase, which gets under way next week.

Manager Hank Daly, of Homewood, states that he and Playing Manager George Speirs are satisfied with the club in the first half. Quite a number of youngsters are in the lineup, but with Ottie Cochran and George Speirs, both veterans, in the infield, there is a steadiness fully appreciated by Daly.

While Dormont and Homewood are clashing in the feature City circuit fray, the Homestead Grays and Crawfords will continue their series at Greenlee Field. The Crawfords hold an edge over the Grays, being two games in front for the series to date. Yesterday, at Akron, the Crawfords turned in a 5-to-2 victory.

Carnegie's chances of staying in front of the County League race will be tested this evening by the Pitcairn Cubs. The Railroaders are a tough team to beat at the Community Field, and Carnegie hardly can afford to drop any points with Millikens and Scott Morgans only a step behind.

NURMI, MATES HEAD FOR U. S.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, June 28.—(AP.)—The vanguard of Finland's Olympic team, including Paavo Nurmi, left today for the United States, via Stockholm and Paris. They are due to reach New York, July 8, on the Mauretania. Fifteen runners were in the group.

The Finnish gymnasts, wrestlers and other Olympic competitors are scheduled to leave July 3, arriving in New York on the steamer Drottningholm.

ITALIANS SAIL SATURDAY

ROME, June 28.—(AP.)—The membership of Italy's Olympic team was definitely completed today. It numbers 130 men and is the largest delegation from any European country.

The team is to be given a final inspirational talk by Premier Mussolini Friday and will sail Saturday from Naples for Los Angeles.

ONE-MAN TEAM ARRIVES

NEW YORK, June 28.—(AP.)—Haiti's Olympic team has arrived in New York and will leave for California in a few days.

The team consists of one man only, Sylvio Cator, who won second place in the broad jump in the 1928 Olympics with a leap of 24 feet 11 inches and then broke the world record in Paris a month later with a leap of 26 feet ⅛ inch.

Goldstep Captures Inaugural Purse

CHICAGO, June 28.—(AP.)—Goldstep, a 5-year-old chestnut gelding sporting the silks of Mrs. S. B. Fairbanks, of Baltimore, stole act one of swanky Arlington Park's $800,000 turf show yesterday by defeating Polydorus for the $5,000 Inaugural Handicap purse.

Although rated so lightly that he was placed among the field horses, the Son of Sweep On-Golden Stairs raced well up with the leaders until he came to the stretch and then rushed to the front, holding off a hard challenge by Polydorus to win by a head. Epithet finished third, a length and a half behind Polydorus, while Jamestown, the heavily played favorite, came in fifth behind My Dandy.

Goldstep paid $35.96 to win, $7.12 to place and $3.94 to show.

Bushy Graham, of Utica, N. Y., in his 10-round semi-final with Johnny Willis, Philadelphia Negro featherweight, will share major interest with Ray Miller and Lew Massey, the headliners, at Greenlee Field's third boxing show tomorrow night.

Bushy Graham

Graham has been a leading title contender in the bantamweight and featherweight classes for several years. He was matched to box Charley (Phil) Rosenberg for the bantamweight crown, but Rosenberg came in far overweight and defeated him. Since then, Graham has met most of the topnotchers, boxing from coast to coast and always in demand. For a time he had a penchant for not keeping engagements and came to be regarded by promoters as a bad risk. He was on the verge of showing here several times, only to have the matches blow up. Now he's definitely hooked on the line.

BAXTER ON CARD

Charley Baxter, who scored a knockout in the last show in the Greenlee arena, is on tomorrow night's card for an eight-round bout with Don McLeod, of Detroit. Eddie Hebner and Eddie Brannon, local lightweights, open the show with a six-rounder.

Ted Yarosz has his fingers crossed, hoping nothing will happen to knock into a cocked hat his match with Johnny Hayes, of Philadelphia, at Hickey Park, Millvale, tomorrow night. He trained faithfully for bouts with Jackie Fields and Johnny Indrisano at Meyers Bowl, only to have both of them called off, and he craves action.

Between Rounds

Jack (Kid) Berg boxes Jimmy McNamara at Long Beach, L. I., tomorrow night. Lope Tenorio and Andy Savoia are paired at Coney Island, Friday night.

The two judges and the referee for the Johnny Risko-Mickey Walker 12-round fight in Cleveland last Friday night scored only three rounds alike, the first, third and seventh, to Risko; and the fifth to Walker. The referee voted eight rounds for Risko, one for Walker and the other three even. One judge conceded Risko seven rounds and Walker three, with two even, and the other official gave Risko six rounds and Walker five, with one even.

Hype Igoe, veteran New York scribe, who picked Max Schmeling as the winner in his fight with Jack Sharkey, wrote, after seeing the moving pictures of the fight: "I tabbed Max out in front by a round, but now I know I was wrong. Levi won the first and final rounds, which originally I scored for Max. Any man who views the pictures and then declares Sharkey lost just isn't fair-minded."

Everett Utterback, Pitt's Negro broad-jumping star, is an entrant in the Golden Gloves amateur boxing tournament that gets under way at the Twenty-seventh Ward A. C. arena on the North Side tonight. He is a middleweight.

Salem A. A. U. Meet Draws Heavy Entry

SALEM, O., June 28.—Approximately 200 high school and college amateur athletes from neighboring Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia cities will gather here Friday night to take part in the first annual Salem A. A. U. track and field carnival.

Lynn Learns That She May Lose Position if She Marries Tom

CHAPTER XVIII.

The shadows lengthened. The radio was silent. The street noises grew less. The remains of the picnic supper still sat coldly, dismally, on the table.

Lynn stirred in Tom's arms—and the battered sofa upon which they had been sitting for hours protested. She said, pushing her hair from her heavy, bright eyes and laying her hand to a flushed cheek, "It's getting late, darling. I must clear up—and go home."

"Stay a little longer." His voice was very low; it scarcely rippled the surface of the spell in which she was slowly and entrancedly drowning.

"I must go." It was madness to stay.

She pulled herself away from him; sat upright, dazed. She got to her feet and took the dishes into the kitchen.

Tom rose and went to the window and stared out of it unseeingly.

Presently Lynn returned to him, ready for the street. "Going to take me home?"

"Rather. As if I'd let you run around New York by yourself! You might get lost," he told her, "or be kidnaped or something. You're such a little thing."

They laughed together shakily, and presently, locking the door, went down the steps. At a turn he caught her, held her against him and kissed her.

"Some day soon we'll be coming home and staying home, together," he said.

And so it was planned that sometime soon they would ask for their vacations; Lynn first, in order to enlist Sarah's sympathy and aid.

SARAH DISAPPROVES

She did so early in the week, lunching with Sarah, looking at her with appeal across the table.

"We've decided to get married, Tom and I." She hurried over Sarah's exclamation of dismay and went on. "Do you think Sarah, I could have my vacation a little earlier? I know I wasn't supposed to take it until fall, but if I could, and if Tom could get off at the same time, it would be wonderful. I want to go home to be married."

Sarah's face was grave. She answered after a moment, "I won't attempt to dissuade you, Lynn, although you know how I stand on the matter. Of course I will do what I can. Still, I don't see why you are figuring on vacations—if you intend to resign."

"Oh, but I don't," Lynn answered radiantly. "I'm going on working. I—we couldn't afford to marry otherwise, and Tom's come around to my way of thinking."

"But I'm afraid it won't work out," said Sarah.

"Oh, why not?" Lynn looked at her unhappily.

AN ADVERSE RULING

Was Sarah like Mara? Lynn had seen Mara the night before. Mara had said bitterly, "I think you're a fool. Any woman's a fool who works after she's married. Any woman's a fool because she doesn't know what that sort of thing does to a man. It's your own business, of course, but I think you're crazy and, believe me, I know!"

"Because," Sarah answered, looking away from the lambent gray eyes, the red mouth, sobered now, the smile fading—"because the bank isn't employing married women; because they are letting out the married women they now have."

"Sarah, I don't believe it."

"It's true," said Sarah stiffly offended.

"I'm sorry. I didn't mean that," Lynn said instantly. "But why, Sarah? I can't understand it. I hadn't heard."

"Why? It's obvious enough," Sarah told her. "We are going through a time of depression; unemployment is on the increase. The bank is going to keep everyone it possibly can—single people, heads of families. But when a woman is married and her husband holds a position also, the bank has decided that the woman must go. If a married woman is the sole support of her family, is widowed or has children, that is different. It isn't difficult to see the justice of it."

MAY LOSE JOB

Lynn was very white. Against the pallor of her face her lips were astonishingly bright. She asked, "You mean that if Tom and I get married I'll be—fired?"

Sarah answered, still looking away from her, "I'm afraid so, Lynn."

The red lips trembled, and the pointed chin shook. Lynn said, low, on a note of heartbreak, "Then all our plans—?"

Sarah's own heart was a battle ground. Her loyal affection for the girl; her antipathy to Lynn's marriage; her own insistence on career rather than marriage for women; her pity for Lynn, looking to her for help, for sympathy; her own normal feeling of triumph that the course of true love didn't, in this instance, run smooth, were embattled factions.

Embarrassed, she said, rather brusquely, "If you are not willing to marry Tom Shepard on his present salary—and I don't blame you for not wanting to—you'll have to wait; that's the only solution I can see. I don't, of course, know for a hard-and-fast fact that the bank would take action against you, but it's my belief that it would."

Lynn ignored all this and seized on one sentence only. "Then we'll have to wait," she said.

Sarah said, turning her eyes to the stricken face, "I'm sorry, Lynn."

Lynn answered almost harshly. "Oh, sorry! But where does that get us?"

"If," suggested Sarah, distressed—"if you want to take the chance—?"

"Do you mean, get married and not let anyone know about it except you? I mean, here at the bank?" asked Lynn, life returning to face and lips in a revival of hope.

"No, no," Sarah answered slowly; "I don't mean that. You know that you couldn't keep it quiet long. It isn't possible." She thought, and Lynn knew, that her own loyalty to her employers would not permit her to be party to the virtual deception. "No, I meant if you and Tom want to go ahead and marry, and then see—?"

Lynn shook her head. "I don't think so. There wouldn't be much happiness in it, would there—waiting for the blow to fall, wondering every day if I were going to be let out?"

Sarah argued no more and, as Lynn made no motion to finish her luncheon, called for the check.

She put her hand on the girl's shoulder with unaccustomed tenderness as they left the restaurant together. If something could be done; if, for instance, David Dwight could help? He had, of course, a personal secretary and probably would be unwilling to take on another, and Lynn had not had sufficient training. Tom, then? But Tom couldn't hope for more money elsewhere. These things went through Sarah's mind in a vain search for some alleviation, some comfort, although she knew in her heart that to help Lynn out of the difficulty would be against her own judgment.

Synopsis

Lynn Harding is young, pretty and ambitious for a career in the Seacoast Bank and Trust, but when she meets Tom Shepard, secretary to one of the bank's vice presidents, love quickly makes her forget the career. Both realize they cannot marry and live on Tom's salary and he will not hear of Lynn's keeping her position. That is their situation when Lynn meets the famous lawyer, David Dwight, through Sarah Dennet, her chief at the bank. Twenty years before he had been Sarah's fiance, but discarded her to marry a woman of wealth and position. Tom objects to Dwight's interest in Lynn. Following a quarrel, the young couple plan to marry. Tom agrees to Lynn's continuing her work. They spend Sunday together in Tom's apartment, planning their honeymoon.

Now Go On

"You mean that if Tom and I get married I'll be fired?" Lynn asked.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

There was an unusual lot of pep in Saturday's meetings of the Sun - Telegraph - Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club. Out at the Rowland Theater, Manager Dick Brown gave the meeting a little more of the intimate touch by having Miss Mildred Rotthoff, an assistant cashier, appear as mistress of ceremonies. Miss Rotthoff had complete charge of the meeting and her personal charm created a lot of enthusiasm among the kiddies, many of whom requested that she take charge again next Saturday.

PLAN DOG SHOW

As we told you yesterday the McKeesport Memorial Chapter had a record-breaking attendance Saturday for the dog show and, following this success, managers of other theaters, where chapters meet every Saturday, are preparing for shows of the same character.

Next Saturday at the memorial every member will be refreshed by a drink of sparkling ginger ale donated by Isaly's dairy. Manager Murdock is also planning a baby doll contest for the girls at one of the meetings in the near future.

ENRIGHT NEWS

Ann Helfgott, "Official Junior Reporter" for the Enright Chapter, stepped out and picked up a lot of news about the members of her chapter. Here are some of the items she prepared for this column:

Jane Fisher, 8 and almost 9, likes to dance, sing and do acrobatics. She should, she's been taking dancing lessons since she was three years of age.

Katherine O'Neil, 13, one of the best dancers in the club, is going on her vacation sometime this week. She will visit Erie, where her parents have a summer lodge.

California, here I come! Louise Mortimer, one of our most popular entertainers, is leaving for the sunny climes of California. We'll all miss her very much. California, our loss is your gain.

DEMOCRACY'S OPPORTUNITY

Majority rule is democratic, and should prevail in any Democratic convention.

The only reason the convention may not want majority rule is because the convention is willing to submit to minority rule; and minority rule means control of the convention by the special interests.

If the majority rule does not prevail, that rejection of democratic policy and principle will probably be followed by other indications that the convention is not democratic.

In other words, if the convention begins with an undemocratic action, it will doubtless proceed with other undemocratic actions and will probably conclude with the control of an exhausted convention by the special interests, and the nomination of candidates satisfactory to Wall Street.

What has happened in previous conventions is a fair criterion of what may happen in this one.

The question before the convention is not at all the contest between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Smith, or between Mr. Garner and Mr. Baker, for example.

It is the conflict between democratic forces and those essentially undemocratic.

If the undemocratic forces win one victory, they will follow by winning other victories—IN THE CONVENTION.

But they will conclude by involving the Democratic party WHEN IT PRESENTS ITSELF TO THE PEOPLE in the same kind of defeat it has suffered in the three preceding presidential elections.

The opportunity offered the Democratic party is the greatest for party success and public service that it has had in a generation.

But to succeed, it must have the courage and the conscience to be DEMOCRATIC.

It must be faithful to its own principles and to the best interests of the public it should seek to serve.

Our Brothers' Keepers

Gov. Pinchot Declares We Cannot Give to the Hungry the Answer of Cain.

Gov. Pinchot outlined the task of the Legislature in precise and definite terms at the opening of the special session last night. The Governor did not exaggerate the seriousness of the situation. He made a plain statement of facts and sounded an appeal for humanity which cannot be ignored in drawing up legislation to meet the present emergency.

He placed the number of unemployed at 1,150,000 in Pennsylvania. He declared that $40,000,000 will be required to provide the necessities of life from July 1 to next March 1. He emphasized the fact that there are only two ways to provide the money.

Appropriations already made must be cut or new revenues must be provided. Neither of these expedients is pleasant, but men, women and children are threatened with starvation. A bond issue cannot provide funds before the winter of 1933 and 1934.

The Governor's plea, eloquent in its simplicity, cannot be ignored:

"We all hope for an early end of the depression. But we cannot risk the welfare of the commonwealth on the chance that our hope may be realized. We must hope for the best and prepare for the worst.

"Let it never be said of this great commonwealth that it turned a deaf ear to the cry of the hungry—and gave its citizens in want nothing more than the answer of Cain."

Jury-Fixing Nipped

Butler County Earns Commendation for Punishing Offenders in Embracery Case.

Jury "fixers" who, judging by some verdicts of the past, can get away with it in Allegheny County, have received stern warning that it will be just as well to confine their activities to this county—or stay out of Butler County, anyway. Sentencing of three persons on charges of embracery and conspiracy there for attempted tampering with the cause of justice by approaching prospective jurors in the Kline-Succop trial in Butler, with a fourth awaiting sentence, is, or should be, sufficient intimation that the law is still considered a sacred institution in some places.

All of the evidence brought forth indicated that the activities of the accused were voluntary, and nothing was shown to connect them in any way with the men awaiting trial. If they had no other motive except friendship, it appears they were at least lacking in consideration of the rights of society, which has no other way than enforcement of the law to protect itself from those who would injure it.

The authorities of Butler have acted promptly to nip the jury-fixing evil and are to be commended.

Justice

The New York police have captured a man who committed highway robbery in California when still a youth and lost himself in the mass and maze of humanity.

This young man had learned the error of his ways and so he settled down to work and to earn his bread in the sweat of his brow.

Nineteen years passed, 19 years of decent living, in which the young man married and raised a family of two girls; 19 years in which the man supported his family by honest labor and brought up his girls properly and did his social and civic duty and became a reputable citizen in his community.

Nineteen years in which the youth became a middle-aged man, and then the New York police found him and are holding him for extradition papers to send him back to prison in California, leaving his wife and daughters to fight their way in the world alone and with the stigma of a felon father.

Very alert, the New York police.

They cannot find the gang murderers, who almost daily deal death in the open streets of the city. They cannot find the racketeers, who hold up almost every industry. They cannot find even one of the 30,000 speakeasies in New York, which daily and nightly break the law and pay for the privilege.

They cannot find kidnapers and killers, but they can find a man who stole when he was a boy and who repented of his evil ways and became a decent citizen and lived an honest life for 19 years.

Of course, the man broke jail and took parole into his own hands, but he accomplished what all parole is supposed to accomplish—reform and restoration to good citizenship.

Of course, Gov. Rolph will pardon the man speedily and send him back to his family. Gov. Rolph is a humane man, a Christian man, and he has read that "Joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentence."

Of course, the man will go back to his family and his work and his effort to make his way in life honestly, although the circumstances will necessarily be a little harsher than before.

But, of course, there will always be in the mind of the man (and in the minds of many others) the cynical suspicion that if he had been a racketeer or had run a bribe-paying speakeasy he would never have been arrested by the alert New York police.

But let us not entertain ideas which tend to undermine the foundations of society. Let us rather congratulate the New York police on having discovered a criminal—who had "gone straight" for 19 years.

That is better than nothing—or worse.

Marry-Go-Round

Marriage Revolutionized

Warfare and transportation are not the only things that have been completely revolutionized in the last decade. There is marriage!

When a man went to the altar in the good old days it was for LOVE in nine cases out of 10. Or for what he thought was love. Love was all a woman had to offer him—there wasn't any more!

But the mid-Victorian woman married for "love—AND . . .!" For love—and a home. Love—and convenience. Love—and social position. And, sometimes, just for love and an escape. An escape from a job or from spinsterhood or from poverty. And her parents saw to it that she got the "AND," whether she was shortchanged on the "love" or not.

But, NOW, how things have been reversed.

It is the women who are marrying for love, alone—because at last, they can afford to! And the men who are marrying for "Love—AND." For love—and a working partner. For love—and ambition. For love—and convenience. Or luxury. Or prestige.

* * *

Marriage is no longer a "graft" on one side and a charity institution or an autocracy on the other. It is a co-operative affair, a 50-50 partnership; and its keynote is RECIPROCITY!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 28.—Thirteen legitimate shows struggled for patronage against a list of 34 during a corresponding low week of last year. In normal times the slack season usually supported about a half hundred. Thus has the current summer been calamitous along the Rialto.

For two weeks not a new offering was scheduled. Charles Dillingham's Globe, long the home of Montgomery and Stone, went into receivership, and Earl Carrol's decisively angled temple passed to other hands. The big movie, Roxy, "went through the wringer." The Hippodrome is shuttered.

Until fall no one can predict the likelihood of a winter revival. Already there are rumors several dramatic and motion picture departments may merge, throwing critics in both divisions out of jobs. The gloom is thick in Dinty Moore's and Lindy's, where theatrical folk gather.

Tables, once bubbling with wit, now reveal an aura of gloom. Even Frisco, wandering from cafe to cafe, scattering stuttering sallies, is glumly mute. The leading clubs—Players, Friars and Lambs—are morgue-like. Only stiff extra assessments stayed the sheriff.

After numerous sabbatical years I journeyed to the Polo Grounds the other day to see a professional baseball game. My chief reaction was the surprising youth of the players. I never realized before what mere boys they are. My enthusiasm, too, had jelled. After a few innings I found myself building words out of the signboard letters and departed before the last ball was pitched. I can understand why McGraw quit.

Also I am one of the bewildered antiquarians constantly wincing at the illegitimatizing of the tender terms for wife, sweetheart and parent. Such similies as red hot mamma, sugar-daddy, frail, skirt, headache, ball-and-chain and the like. Once, too, hostess was a term for gentle ladies who gave "afternoons" on the lower avenue. Today it is a symbol for gyp hussies of the dance halls and clip joints.

There is a nipping humor in the aside remarks of the pavement hawker—an edge of sarcasm whetted, one presumes, by flagstones. Idling before a little table of gim-cracks, a spectator reached out to pick up an article and clumsily cascaded most of them to the sidewalk. As though talking to no one in particular, the salesman interpolated his spiel with: "Just practicing folks, tomorrow he tears down the Chrysler tower."

In a Dayton, O., boarding house, pretentiously called "The Vendome," I was once a fellow guest with a lightning calculator, a swift working wit who could deftly side-track hecklers without wounding their vanity. He pitched under a banjo torch on street corners and somehow brightened every spot where he stood. So amiable were my declensions in those days I halved my $16 weekly newspaper salary so he could get to a nearby town. Next I saw of him was several years later in that contortion alley, Opera place, in Cincinnati. He was still summing astonishingly in chalk and singing wonders of his patented needle threader. Out of the tail of his eye was a glint of recognition. But nothing else. When the crowd thinned I inquired: "How about that $8?" As quick as that he said: "Don't worry, it's the best investment you ever made." And only Bob Ripley could believe it, but almost 15 years later I received his money order for $50 from a small town in California with this terse note: "What did I tell you?"

Banks Can Aid Jobless By Freer Lending Policy

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

THE neck of the bottle in the campaign for economic readjustment through credit expansion is the frightened money lender.

He is at present keeping from the labor-employing and productive classes the benefits of the greatly enlarged pool of credit resulting from Federal Reserve policy.

Until this juncture, there were several barriers to affirmative action, which have at length fortunately been broken down.

The banker was in no mood for liberality toward borrowers as long as bank reserves were dwindling.

However, as a result of the gigantic open market purchases by the Federal Reserve System since February 24, enough additional Federal Reserve credit was created to add over $500,000,000 to reserves, and member banks now have excess reserves approaching $275,000,000. In non-panic times, self-interest impels the member banks promptly to convert non-earning excess reserves into profit-creating loans and investments.

YET in the present emergency, the banker held back as long as depositors showed a distrust of banks. But as a result of the new policy of counter deflation, there has now been a net decrease in hoarding for many weeks. The bank depositor has fallen into line.

The cautious banker, nevertheless, stayed near the storm cellar as long as foreign creditors were continuing to make the greatest demands in history on our banks for gold. But now it seems that a cessation of this movement has occurred.

With these special circumstances corrected and with business and the price structure not only thoroughly deflated, but greatly overliquidated, a safe basis for freer lending and investing exists, provided the private banks through concerted action give up their obstructionist tactics.

If bankers want to be scientific and perform a useful service, they should strive to stabilize conditions by requiring a smaller ratio of net quick assets to net quick liabilities after widespread deflation than they do in a period of relative inflation and excited prosperity.

APOLOGISTS for the banks beg the question when they say that they are ready to take on all the PRIME commercial paper that they can get.

As a matter of fact, the Grade AAA corporations, which financed themselves by selling stock during boom times, are overloaded with cash and are not really in need of bank credit.

The banks will not have significantly modified their credit and third grade borrowers—the sound and reputable small business man, who in the aggregate are responsible for such a huge proportion of the total trade volume of the country.

Most candid authorities on the money market concede that the banks, frightened by the blizzard of deflation which in the final quarter of 1931 was reducing bank credit at the alarming rate of 25 per cent a year, were unduly harsh toward borrowers.

In a recent address, Dr. B. M. Anderson, Jr., economist for the Chase National Bank of New York, significantly admitted:

"Many banks under pressure from depositors were forced to obtain money from whatever source they could, and liquidated good merchants and withheld credit from other good merchants and manufacturers. Other banks, not themselves under acute pressure, but frightened, also adopted a very unduly rigid credit policy."

Another competent monetary economist, Lionel Edie, in his book, "The Banks and Prosperity," says,

"The private bankers do not sit by with Olympian detachment and judge this rhythm of applications on its broader merits. Rather, they are in the midst of the current and are swept along by it . . . In the pessimism of depression, they shift emphasis from 'new business' to 'salvage and liquidation.' They lend minimum sums to even 'A A A' risks, slash to the bone balance-sheet values of applicants, and discountenance as 'undeserving borrowers' enterprises which a little later they will be scrambling to obtain as customers."

THE banks can be as helpful by increasing their bond purchases as they can by making customer loans.

At length, member banks have gotten their rediscounts below $500,000,000 and usually they feel free to invest and lend after getting below that figure, although early in 1930 they did not feel comfortable until rediscounts dropped to the irreducible minimum of $300,000,000.

The country, deceived by the inevitable time lag between a new credit policy and constructive business results, is needlessly pessimistic.

Constructive forces are beginning successfully to combat the unmanageable deflation which reduced the deposits of 600 weekly reporting member banks alone to the tune of $4,000,000,000 from July, 1931, to March, 1932, just before the new credit policy was initiated.

The expected beneficent results from ending the credit panic and enlarging the potential supply of currency and credit can be quickened by a conversion of bankers and good borrowers to a more constructive attitude.

Meantime, the immediate need is a program for utilizing the additional credit facilities in job-creating productive activities, such as capital expenditures by private corporations, public works, and enlarged production of salable, consumable goods.

The next step should be a concerted drive to make use of the large resources which are still lying dormant while 10,000,000 persons are clamoring VAINLY for gainful employment.
